The Card of New-York Business Men.

Gen. Grant's Treatment of the South.

What a Veteran Thinks of Horace Greeley.

An Analysis of the Vote of Ohio.

The Duty of Good Citizens to Register Today.

The Card of Leading Business Men.

Alluding to the card recently published in the Times by leading business men of this City, on the subject of the national finances and the Republican policy of administering them, the Pittsburg (Penn.) Commercial says: "It promises to exert an admirable influence on the campaign, not only in New-York but throughout the country generally. The names of the card in question were men who are far more in the habit of looking at public questions from a business than a political stand-point. In the policy of the Republican Party they see stability, safety, and economy; while they look upon the election of Greeley as a calamity which would unsettle and most disastrously affect all commercial results. The facts stated were so plain and simple, yet so correct and convincing, that the card has been copied into nearly all the leading Republican papers of the Union, with it is said, excellent effects upon the minds of working men, as well as business men. Everywhere it is alleged the former know that they have exactly the same interest in the results of the election which the moneyed classes have. What the recent meetings of the business men of Philadelphia and Pittsburg were to the campaign in this State, the address in question bids fair to be to that of the country at large."

Grant's Treatment of the South.

The Staunton Valley Virginian, a Democratic paper, publishes an able article, contrasting the records of Grant and Greeley, in the course of which it says:

"With the views of fairness we entertain, we regard the appeal, week after week, of several Valley papers based upon the following paragraph, as unjust, insincere, and irrelevant to this canvass. Whether Gen. Grant ever gave such an order is a question with us. If he did, it was issued in time of war, when every nerve of the Federal power was stretched to the utmost tension to overcome the Confederacy. It was given as a necessity of war, and is so stated. This is the paragraph, said to be an extract from an order of Gen. Grant to Sheridan:

'Do all the damage you can to the railroads and crops—many of them of all descriptions, and negroes, so as to prevent planting. If the rebels can be kept out another year, let the Shenandoah Valley remain a barren waste.

'It should be remembered that this Valley was regarded by both Governments as the 'granary of the Confederacy,' and that the destruction of material resources was one of the most humane methods of closing the war and saving human life. As evidence that it was not issued in a vandal spirit, we have only to refer to the order Grant gave to allow the soldiers who murdered at Appomattox to take with them their rifles, for the decisive reason that it would enable them to put out and cultivate a crop. There was far less of the fiend and less of the vandal shown in this order than in that of the Confederate authorities which set in flames their own capital, destroyed thousands of dollars worth of property of private citizens, without a cause or a purpose that ever yet has been shown. It was no more brutal than the burning of Chambersburg by the Confederates. We do not wish to be regarded as justifying one more than the other. They were both extreme measures, not called for by the necessities of the occasion. But the reason assigned for making the Shenandoah Valley a barren waste was a military one. It was for the purpose of crippling the power of the Confederacy by destroying resources. The burning of Chambersburg was purely revenge, and that of Richmond crayon cowardice."

You Must Register to Vote.

Voters who have failed to register their names have neglected an important duty. Registration is the only means by which citizens can enjoy their right of franchise. It should be clearly understood by the people that the last days of the registration are today and to-morrow. The offices open at 8 A. M. and close at 9 P. M. each day, and after the hour of 9 to-morrow evening any voter who has failed to register cannot vote on the 5th of November.

Views of a Veteran.

Gen. James Wilson, the veteran Republican of New-Hampshire, has been compelled by the state of his health to decline all invitations to address political meetings in his native State during the present campaign. The honest old man has lost none of his old-time earnestness and enthusiasm, however, as is shown by a recent letter regretting his inability to speak at Lebanon. In it he says: "It so happens that I have never failed to meet any engagement that I have ever made to speak at a political meeting in my whole life, and I do not want now to make a failure. It would give me great pleasure to meet the good and true Republicans at Lebanon, and tell to them if I could be sure of feeling in the right vein for it when the day came. But as that is uncertain I must decline. I never felt more disposed to 'pitch in' and 'lend a hand' to my political friends than now in this campaign. The country never needed the services of all patriotic citizens more than at this time. If Horace Greeley should be elected President of these United States on the 5th of November proximo, by the party who are supporting him, the country will be in more dangerous condition than it was on the 4th of March, 1861, in my judgment." "God save!"

Register Yourself at Once.

Register immediately. The last opportunities are today from 8 o'clock A. M. to 9 P. M., and to-morrow between the same hours. Citizens cannot vote unless their names are upon the registry lists. Personal attendance at the office of the Board of Registry is necessary. The important duty should not be neglected.

The Vote of Ohio.

In publishing the official figures of the election in Ohio, the Columbus State Journal says: "The highest vote cast was 519,867 for Secretary of State. This is the largest vote ever polled in the State. Four years ago the vote for Secretary of State was 518,747; the Presidential vote was 518,820, and the last Gubernatorial vote was 484,274. The Republican vote for Secretary of State this year is 1,120 less than was cast for Sherwood four years ago. The Democratic vote for the same office is 3,000 larger. Noyes' majority for Governor last year was 20,105. Which is 1,413 greater than Wilson's majority this year for Secretary of State. The Democratic gain in Hamilton County alone was 7,129. It will, therefore, be seen this was reduced 1,098 outside of that county. The Temperance folks do not seem to have made much headway. Stewart, their candidate for Governor last year, received a vote of 4,592. In the recent election, Schumaker, their candidate for Secretary of State, received 2,982—a loss of 1,610."

Gen. Hartranft in Town—A Levee at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel.

Gen. John F. Hartranft, the successful candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, visited the Republican National Committee Rooms, Fifth-avenue Hotel, last evening, and was received by Ex-Gov. E. D. Morgan, Chairman. A large number of gentlemen extended their congratulations. The levee lasted for a couple of hours. Among the prominent gentlemen who called upon the Governor elect were Gen. Joshua Owen, of Philadelphia; Gen. Henry E. Davies, D. Vickers, Jno. W. Ziegler, Schenkler, Gov. R. P. Hoyt and Ex-Gov. Wm. Dennison, Gen. Col. Thos. Cochrane, Penn.; Gen. Hillhouse, United States Treasury; Gen. Commissioner John J. Davenport, Thomas Acton and Col. Joel B. Stevens, New-York. In conversation, Gen. Hartranft said Buckalew had drawn out the full Democratic strength of Pennsylvania, and the Liberals had all voted against him. He did not see that they could do any better in November, and did not believe they would do as well. There were many Democrats in the State who voted for Buckalew who would vote for Grant, and many more who would not vote for Greeley. He felt confident that the Republican majority for Grant would be larger than that cast for the State ticket.

The Register.

Today and to-morrow are the last days of registration. The sessions of the Boards of Inspectors commence at 8 o'clock A. M., and end at 9 P. M. each day. Voters who have not already put their names upon the registry lists will be debarred from voting if they fail to do so today or to-morrow.

Are You Registered?

The Registry lists will be finally closed at 9 o'clock P. M. to-morrow, after which hour those who have not registered will be unable to vote on election day. The duty of registration is one that should not be neglected. Only two opportunities remain for those who have not yet registered. The offices are open for the inspection of voters' names from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. today and to-morrow.

The Tenth Congressional District Republicans.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting of the Republicans of the Tenth Congressional District was held last evening at the hall of the East-side Association, corner of Eighty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, to ratify the Republican Federal, State and Municipal nominations. Hon. George Opdyke presided. A series of resolutions were adopted pledging support in the election of Hon. Wm. A. Darling for the Tenth Congressional District, and also indorsing the entire Republican ticket for Federal, State and City offices. Hon. Wm. A. Darling delivered an able address explanatory of his position as Republican candidate, and favorably remarking on his prospects of immediate relief from his rival, Fernando Wood. [Cheers for Wood, and confusion.] He was glad to say that no Republican friend of his ever undertook to disturb a meeting where Mr. Wood spoke or any other Democrat. [Cheers.] They could afford to be magnanimous, and those adverse cheers were but the echo of the abuse poured out by the entire Democracy of the country against their illustrious chieftain. [Cheers.] He had no words with men of that character, and such action was little calculated to improve Mr. Wood's chances with the intelligent and honest men of that district. [Some friend of Wood here sought to disturb the meeting by a fight with some one present, but after a few minutes he was ejected, and quiet was restored.] Mr. Darling was very sorry that Mr. Wood's friends had no better argument in his support than to interfere with a peaceful proceeding of his opponents. [Applause.] But Wood's cause was a losing one. He was afraid of the Republican power in the district, and he confidently assured them that his force would be fully realized by the result of the election. [Cheers.]

Speeches were also delivered by Gen. Bruce, Benjamin K. Phelps and others, advocating Mr. Darling's course, and the proceedings terminated.

The following Democratic nominations were made last night:

Republican Rally in the Sixth Ward, Brooklyn.

A very large meeting was held at Latimer Hall, Court-street, Brooklyn, under the auspices of the Second Congressional District Grant and Wilson Campaign Club. Hon. J. W. Ostrander made the opening speech. He drew a comparison between President Grant and Horace Greeley, showing up, in an amusing manner, the inconsistencies of the latter. He also eulogized the Republican candidates, taking them individually and seriatim, and going over the National, State and local tickets.

Hon. Augustus Ford followed, in a pungent criticism of Mr. Greeley's course, illustrated, as he proceeded, with numerous amusing anecdotes.

A. G. Williams, Republican candidate for Sheriff, and Hon. E. D. Benedict, followed, in the order named. The speeches were well received. A band of music enlivened the occasion.

The Seventh District Demonstration.

At a meeting of the Seventh Assembly District Grant & Wilson Colored Campaign Club, last evening, at No. 12 University-place, resolutions were unanimously passed indorsing Wm. F. Havemeyer for Mayor; George W. Clarke, for Assembly, Seventh District, and John D. Lawson, for Congress, Eighth District. Speeches on the topics of the day were delivered by the Chairman, Mr. T. W. Ross, and Mr. George W. Clarke, who especially urged his hearers to vote for none, but honest candidates for the Legislature. The work of reform, he said, was not completed, and the great battle of last year had yet to be fought out.

The Italian Republicans.

The Italian Republican Association, formed some months ago in support of the National Republican nominations, held a meeting at Brooker Assembly-rooms last night. The nomination of James O'Brien was indorsed, when upon Mr. O'Brien delivered a brief address, dwelling on the course of his friends that his opponent, Mr. Havemeyer, is a good man, but that there is one thing against him—he is too old, and he and the stalwags would go on under his eyes. He did not seem anything about the support of the newspapers. After which the meeting adjourned.

Citizens' Reform Association in the Twentieth District.

The Independent Citizens' Reform Association of the Twentieth Assembly District held a large and enthusiastic ratification meeting at Brevoort Hall, Fifty-fourth-street and Third-avenue, last evening.

Resolutions were adopted to the effect that the citizens of the Twentieth Assembly District will no longer submit to the dictation and control of "Ring" or clique, of whatever political complexion or however composed, but claim the right to be heard and to act for themselves in choosing representatives in public office.

The nominations of Geo. N. Williams, for Assembly; Christian Schwartz, for Assistant Alderman, and Alfred Conger, for Alderman, were ratified. Messrs. Williams and Schwartz, in short speeches, thanked the Association, after which the meeting adjourned.

REPEATERS IN THE SIXTH WARD

Greeley Voters Located in Mulberry-Street by the "Dead Rabbit" Gang.

One hundred and thirty-three repeaters in the Greeley interest have, during the past two days, been located in the buildings Nos. 1, 3 and 11 Mulberry-street, the old head-quarters of the "Dead Rabbit" gang, and in the large tenement-houses Nos. 24 and 26 Mulberry-street. The leader of the Dead Rabbit faction superintended the location of the repeaters. It is understood, from the highest authority, that these ruffians, a number of whom are Boston and Philadelphia sluggers and roughs, will present themselves in the Sixth Ward for registration today and to-morrow. The attention of United States Commissioner Davenport to this will prevent a glaring outrage on the respectable citizens of the City.

Republican Meeting at Greenwich, Conn.

On Tuesday evening the Republicans of Greenwich had a very large meeting, which was addressed by Col. Hoyt on the issues of the day. The Democrats in that section have heretofore had things their own way, but this Fall our friends feel convinced that they will give their copperhead opponents a sound drubbing. Many leading Democrats of Greenwich utterly refuse to vote for Greeley, and several have openly announced their intention to vote for Grant and Wilson.

The Irish Republican Association of the Third Assembly District met last evening, at Hibernia Hall; Mr. James Kelly in the chair. The Association indorsed Grant and Wilson, and Edward A. Willoughby for Assembly. A mass-meeting will be held on Thursday to ratify the State and local tickets.

The Seventeenth Assembly District Republican Association met last night in Fifteenth-street Church, Col. Joel W. Mason presiding. Assistant Alderman Nicholas E. Conner spoke briefly, commending the Republican candidates. He was followed by Col. T. B. Thorne, who delivered a lively speech. Many ladies were present.

The Ninth Assembly District Grant and Wilson Campaign Club held their last meeting for the present campaign last evening at Bleecker Building, Mr. J. Quimbys in the chair. The large hall was densely crowded and the proceedings were opened by the Idlewild Glee Club singing, "Grant Shall Our Watchword Be." Mr. D. G. Riddle and Mr. Isaac Dayton addressed the meeting. The great feature of the evening was the Glee Club, who appeared in Kinkley costume and sang some campaign melodies. The State and local Republican tickets were then indorsed, after which the meeting adjourned.

General Notes.

Secretary Boutwell is expected to speak in Jersey City on Saturday evening.

Hon. A. W. Tenney spoke at a Republican mass-meeting in Fort Byron yesterday. Delegations were present from Westport, Montezuma, and Congress.

The Greeleyite Democrats of the First Massachusetts District have nominated J. M. Day, of Barnstable, for Congress, and George Delano, of New-Bedford, for Presidential Elector.

Augustus Repsloes was chosen candidate for member of Assembly from the Second District of Queens County by an independent Convention, held Wednesday evening, in Dutch Kills, Long Island City.

Hon. Emery A. Storrs, of Chicago, addressed a large gathering of Republicans at Spring Valley, N. Y., yesterday afternoon. The Grant and Wilson Club of that town is hard at work, and with every prospect of winning a substantial victory.

Col. Walter Price, of Warren County, New-York, has declined the Democratic nomination for Assemblyman in his district. As the Colonel is the only man who the Democracy stood a chance of electing, his declination insures the success of the Republican nominee.

The Republicans of Sag Harbor and vicinity held a large and enthusiastic meeting on Wednesday night. Hon. Jason B. Brown, State Senator in Indiana, made an eloquent address of over two hours in length. The Republican campfires burn brightly in Suffolk County, and she will roll up a splendid majority for the whole ticket.

Sixth New-York Cavalry Association.

The Officers' Association of the Sixth New-York Veteran Cavalry held their seventh annual reunion at Delmonico's last evening. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, W. L. Meermance; First Vice-President, W. E. Rice; Second Vice-President, M. D. Lewis; Treasurer, J. B. Wheeler; Secretary, J. C. Schermerhorn.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

Another Letter of Horace Greeley of Interest to Colored Men.

Heartless and Important Interference with a Scheme of Benevolence Toward Colored Women—The Senate Committees To Be Reformed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Another letter from Mr. Greeley has been unearthed, which, considering the circumstances under which it was written, will go far to offset the fulsome assurances which he has taken pains to give to every colored person who has called upon him for an expression during the present campaign. The Woman's Campaign, a Republican sheet which is issued here, will to-morrow contain the following letter, the original of which is in Mr. Greeley's unmistakable handwriting. It should be stated in explanation that the lady to whom it is addressed, Mrs. J. B. Griffing, was engaged at the time in raising funds to send the unemployed colored women of the District to places where they could be employed. She had been engaged in this benevolent and humane work for several years, under the original approval of Secretary Stanton and with the help of Congress, which granted her several small appropriations to aid her work. Just previous to the time named in this letter, she had issued a public appeal for funds to prosecute her purpose. In responses and entirely unsolicited, Mr. Greeley wrote the following letter:

NEW-YORK TRIBUNE,
NEW-YORK, Sept. 7, 1872.

MRS. GRIFFING: In my judgment, you and others who wish to retrend the blacks crowded into Washington do them great injury. Had they been sold years ago, "You must find work, or out and seek it," they would have been spared much misery. They are, as a class, heedless race, taking no thought of the morrow, and liking to lean on those who befriend them. Your course aggravates their weakness, when you should raise their ambition and stimulate them to self-reliance. Unless you can change your course speedily and totally, the swarming of blacks to the District will increase, and the argument that slavery is their natural condition will be measurably strengthened. So long as they look to others to calculate and provide for them, they are not truly free. If there be any women capable of earning wages, who would rather some one else than herself should pay her passage to the place where she could have work, then she needs reconstruction and awakening to honest self-restraint. Yours, HORACE GREELEY.

To Mrs. J. B. GRIFFING, Washington, D. C.

THE SENATE COMMITTEES TO BE RE-FOUNDED.

One of the first things to be done after the meeting of Congress will be the re-forming of the Senate Committees. Messrs. Trumbull, Schurz, Tipton, Sumner, Rice, and Fenton can no longer complain if they are classed with Democrats, and treated like Democrats in making up the committees. Mr. Trumbull will not, of course, expect to continue in his position as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Fenton will not expect to retain super-vision over the contingent expenses of the Senate. Mr. Rice will give up mines and mining. As the Democrats will be entitled to only one member on the Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Schurz may have to give up his position on that, where he never ought to have been placed, since he has proven himself much more of a foreigner than an American. The Chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee will undoubtedly be given to Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, who has been, for some time second on that Committee. He certainly cannot be regarded as less able or less fitted for the position than Mr. Trumbull. The places of the other Liberal Senators can also be easily filled without detriment to the business of the Senate or the service of the country.

Dispatch to the Associated Press

THE TREASURY AND THE LEGAL TENDER RESERVE.

A delegation, representing business men of St. Louis, Cincinnati, Dubuque, Milwaukee and Pittsburg, called upon Secretary Boutwell this morning and urged upon him the importance of a uniform stringency of the money market by increasing the volume of the currency. They showed the great scarcity of currency throughout the West, and urged him to issue the 044,000,000 of legal-tender reserve. The Secretary, in reply, said he was glad to hear their statements, as it would save the matter his earnest attention.

ARMY AND NAVY ORDERS.

Lieut. Commander Frederick Rogers, has been ordered as assistant inspector of ordnance at the Washington Navy-Yard. Ensign Blanchard has been detached from the Pensacola and placed on sick leave. Capt. Thomas Wilsoy, of the army, has ordered as soon as possible to repair to San Francisco and report to the Commanding General of the Military Division of the Pacific for assignment as Purchasing and Depot Commissary at San Francisco and Chief Commissary of Subsistence for the Department of California, relieving Capt. M. P. Small, who, on being relieved, will report to the commanding officer of the Department of Arizona for assignment as Chief Commissary of Subsistence of that Department.

THE INDIANS.

A Reservation for Cochise and a Thousand Apaches Selected in Arizona.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 24.—Gen. Howard has arrived at San Diego, en route from Arizona. He reports passing eleven days in the camp of the great Apache Chief, Cochise. He has selected the south-east corner of Arizona, fifty-five miles square, for the new reservation for 1,000 Apaches, with Cochise as their leader.

Another "Straight Talk" at the Indian Bureau—What the Indians Want Done.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The Indian delegation, under charge of Capt. Alford, came to the Indian Bureau today to take leave of Commissioner Walker. An Arrapahoe Chief asked that he be allowed to have a gun and powder and lead, as there were a few buffaloes remaining within his reservation. The Commissioner said that he had no objection to permitting arms and ammunition being procured for such use, as he was not afraid that they would be employed against the whites, the Arrapahoes being friendly to them. The only difficulty was that some Indians might sell their arms and ammunition to those with whom they met while hunting. He would, however, send word to their Agent to sell them small quantities of ammunition and arms for hunting, but, when the hunting was over, they must bring back their arms to the Agent, who will give them leave to hunt. The Commissioner had no objection to traders accompanying them with their wagons with supplies and to bring back the game. He should write the Indian Superintendent word to buy each Chief of the Arrapahoes a wagon, because the President trusts them, and because they have shown themselves to be our friends.

An old Comanche Chief thanked the Commissioner for giving him a good road to travel. His people had instructed him to represent their views, and said they would agree to whatever he might do. They were anxiously awaiting his return, that he might tell them of the talk he had had with the Commissioner.

Another old Chief, like the Comanche, declared his heart was good, which he gave to the Commissioner. He liked what had been said so much that he had nothing more to say. He, however, wanted a wagon.

The Commissioner, addressing the Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches, said that he several days ago gave them a straight talk, and wanted them to carry it back to their people. If they should do all that he had told them to do, all would go right, and it would be well for them to send for their friends, so as to bring them within the reservation by the 15th of December, if they wish to save their lives. He had received a message over the wires telling him that Col. McKenzie's command had a fight with the Comanches, killing twenty-three of them and capturing 120 squaws and children, outside of the reservation. This evidently was unwelcome news to the Commissioner, and they showed some uneasiness while listening to it. The Commissioner added that those who remain outside the reservation may be similarly treated. The heart of the Great Father is angry, and his hand would be heavy against them. As to the complaints of rations which had been asked, he would tell the Avent that what money was thereby saved should be spent entirely for the benefit of those who behave the best. This will be the rule, and he now wanted to say a word to the Wichitaws, and that was they must return the horses they had stolen. And to the Caddoes he said that their Great Father would help them in their new homes. The Commissioner now addressed himself to all of the Indians, saying that he hoped their conference would prove of much benefit to all, and that they would do everything their Great Father desires.

The Indians then bade farewell, shaking hands with the Commissioner, and leaving the room in evident good humor.

NEW-YORK.

Grand Republican Rally and Torch-Light Procession in West Troy—Several Clubs Joined by Democratic Roughs—Hon. John A. Griswold Not Dangerously Ill.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The Republicans of West Troy had a grand torch-light procession to-night. Clubs from Albany, Troy, Lansingburg, Cohoes, Waterford and Green Island were present, and made a magnificent display. Some of the clubs were joined by Democratic roughs, but none of the torch-bearers were much injured. Very many buildings were brilliantly illuminated, and in some localities colored fires were burned.

The Republicans of West Troy, although previously in the minority, are confident of carrying the village at the coming election, and the attack to-night has not hurt their chances.

Hon. Jno. A. Griswold's family authorize a denial of the dispatch, printed in today's Times, to the effect that that distinguished Republican leader is lying at the point of death. Although quite ill, no apprehension of immediate danger is or has been entertained.

CANADA.

Change of Ministry in Ontario—Indians Reported Advancing Toward Fort Garry.

TORONTO, Ontario, Oct. 24.—Hon. Mr. Blake, the Premier of the Ontario Government, and Hon. Mr. McKenzie, Treasurer, have resigned. Both these gentlemen have decided to sit in the Dominion Parliament. The Lieutenant-Governor has sent for Vice Chancellor Mowat to form a new Government. Mr. Mowat has resigned the office of Vice-Chancelor and accepted the task. The new Ministry will be shortly announced.

Advices received from Fort Garry state that a large body of Sioux Indians are reported on the road for that settlement. It was not yet understood whether they were friendly or otherwise. Some movement was on foot to induce the Red Lake Chippewas against the Boundary Commission, but the Commission, having American troops as an escort, are not likely to be much troubled.

Accident to the Lachine Canal—Interruption to the River Traffic.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—The Montreal steamer Picton, in going down the Lachine Canal, today, came in collision with the gate of the St. Paul locks, breaking them open. The accident is of a very serious character, and some days will probably be required for repairs, interrupting the river traffic, which is very brisk at the present time.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

THE SEASON OF OPERA BOUFFE.

The crowded condition of the Olympic Theatre last evening offered convincing proof that the excellences of Offenbach's "Genevieve de Brabant," though out of sight for some years, were not yet out of mind. These excellences are to be sought in the music of the score, which is always tuneful, and in some instances decidedly melodious, and in the opportunities the composer's libretti-ste have provided for a liberal display of scenery and dresses. Several of the numbers of "Genevieve" are, indeed, worth remembering. The pretty serenade in act the first; the vivacious couplets in the second act, following the transformation of the little pastry cook into a gallant page; and the brolsome, at a later stage of proceedings, are always worth listening to, while the remainder of the songs can at least be commended as the very reverse of dull. The story to which the notes are wedded is not so deserving of praise; the best that can be said of it is that its incidents are sufficiently varied to allow the painter's brush and the costumer's taste the freest play, and that it embodies the episode in which the gendarmes are concerned—an episode whereof the influence, here, as in Europe, has invariably secured the success of the opera. From the applause bestowed at this point of the performance, as well as from the earlier and the later demonstrations of pleasure, it was evident that the effect of the representation last night was highly gratifying. Without at all underestimating the impression of the comic duet, in which the sweets and hardships of a soldier's life are commented upon by the pursuers of Genevieve, Mlle. Aimée's sprightliness and accomplishments were strongest, we think, in producing that result. The lady brings to Drogan, as to her better-known characters, the spell of a pretty face and form, the charm of a fresh voice, and an earnestness and vivacity, the potency of which the slender importance of a part, or the fatigue consequent upon previous exertions never lessens. From the opening rondo, in which the qualities of the wonderful pie are set forth, to the verses accompanying the gift—or rather the intended gift, as careless stage management prevented its consummation yesterday—of Genevieve's coveted locks to her recreant husband, Mlle. Aimée acted with unflagging spirit, and sang with corresponding energy. Toher work and to that of M. Juteau, the audience was constrained to look for the pleasure to be derived from the principal vocal music of "Genevieve." Of M. Juteau, it can be mentioned at once that his picture of Sifroy was very comical, and that his numerous songs were delivered with vim and correctness. All the performers, but these were ill from the capricious weather, Mlle. Benoit, who personated Genevieve, revealed herself an intelligent and successful actress, but was, as to voice, Aore de comdot. M. Duchiesne, as Charles Martel, was courageous enough to attempt to do his whole duty, but was too hoarse to be harmonious. Even the sweetness of M. Gabel's tones had suffered, and a sudden disposition to choke, incurbed, out of a desire to acknowledge the kind reception accorded him, to emotion instead of phlegm, well-nigh interfered with the due so impatiently awaited. Without going into details, made impossible by the late hour at which the representation was ended, we must note that this passage of "Genevieve" provoked as much uproarious laughter as when it was first listened to. M. Gabel, who was the original Pitou, in Paris as in New-York, assumed that role last evening, and his grimaces, his bearing, and his words—perhaps not worthy of imitation but certainly inimitable—elicited merriment, which only seemed to weary after the duet had been done thrice. Throughout the fourth tableau, M. Gabel, who had for an associate M. Lecuyer, is clever and amusing. He should, however, be reminded—and it is unnecessary to refer the "creator" of Pitou to Shakspeare as authority—that "those that play the clowns should speak no more than is set down for them." His remarks to the audience on the occasion we write of were in the worst taste imaginable. In addition to the artists whose names we have given, Mlle. Rolland is to be complimented for her efforts not only to picture Brigitte, but also to sing Mlle. Bonelli's lines, whenever her share of the business allowed her to do so. The choruses in "Genevieve" were as telling as could be desired, and the harlequinade songs and dances as suggestive of jollity and activity. Mlle. Aimée's dresses were very fine. The entertainment, which was cheered on by much generous applause, will demand more minute consideration when a few supplementary rehearsals will have compressed it and smoothed out a roughness often apparent. It may be witnessed every evening this week and at a matinée on Saturday.

RUBINSTEIN CONCERTS.

A very large audience was gathered at Steinway Hall, last evening, when Messrs. Rubinstein and Wieniawski, and Mme. Liebhart—Miss Orensby being absent because of illness—supplied the first of a series of three concerts. Mr. Rubinstein's numbers were Bach's "Fantasie Chromatique" and some of Chopin's "Etudes;" Mr. Wieniawski rendered a chaconne by Bach, and his own very fine fantasia on motives from "Faust." The two artists played together Beethoven's "Kreutzer" sonata. To-night, the second concert may be attended. The principal features of the programme are as follow:

1. a. Air and variations ..... Handel
   b. Kalecatuge et Scherzo ..... Scarlatti
   Anton Rubinstein.
2. a. Elegie ..... Ernst
   b. Polonaise ..... Wieniawski
   Henri Wieniawski.
4. Variations Serieuses ..... Mendelssohn
   Anton Rubinstein.
5. Rondo, F major ..... F. Schubert
   For piano and violin.
   Anton Rubinstein and Henri Wieniawski.
7. a. Aria ..... Bach
   b. Bourrée ..... Vieuxtemps
   Henri Wieniawski.
8. Etudes ..... Anton Rubinstein
   Anton Rubinstein.

ITALIAN OPERA.

"Don Giovanni" is to be repeated at the Academy of Music this evening. The already satisfying performance of Wednesday will doubtless be improved upon, and a brilliant audience will surely be gathered in expectation of an impressive representation.

THE CROPS.

Reduced Aggregate in Maryland and the Middle States—Increase in Some of the Southern States, California, and the Western States.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—A synopsis of the October crop report of J. R. Dodge, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, indicates the comparative production of wheat, and the condition of the crop, on the 1st of October. The record of the yield of wheat is quite as variable as was that of its condition during the Summer. Some States have made superior crops, and others almost the poorest ever grown. The New-England States have nearly sustained their usual average. The Middle States and Maryland together reduced their last year's aggregate from 37,000,000 bushels to 24,000,000, or thirty-five per cent. The Southern States, from Virginia to Tennessee, which were known to have increased largely their wheat area, appear to have enlarged their production fifty per cent., or from 15,000,000 bushels to 22,000,000. California has increased her product at least seventy-five per cent. Minnesota and Iowa have made a material increase, while Missouri and Kansas, the former growing Winter wheat mainly, the latter both Winter and Spring, have had a comparative failure in both varieties. Virginia and Kentucky have had good crops, while Michigan and Ohio estimate diminished yields, as does the entire district between the Ohio and the lakes, the Miami and the Hudson. Returns have been received from counties representing a large proportion of the wheat of each State, which indicate an increase of about five per cent. over the product of last year, which was estimated at 230,000,000 bushels. It is probable that the completed estimate will not fall short of 240,000,000 bushels, upon an area little less than 20,000,000 acres. This will make the yield between twenty and thirteen bushels per acre, which may be considered an average for the United States. The increase in States west of the Mississippi appears to be about 15,000,000 bushels, or, in comparison with last year's product 85,000,000 to 70,000,000 bushels. The central belt of wheat-producing territory north and south is this year farther west than ever before, and is nearly identical with the ninetieth meridian, which divides centrally the States of Wisconsin and Illinois.

Nearly all the wheat produced between this line and the Mississippi River is raised in the western half of those two States. The quality of the wheat is, in most of the States, better than last year. The percentage of product, in comparison with last year, in each of the States, is as follows: Maine, 105; New-Hampshire, 96; Vermont, 95; Massachusetts, 90; Connecticut, 96; New-York, 90; New-Jersey, 80; Pennsylvania, 60; Delaware, 85; Maryland, 66; Virginia, 101; North Carolina, 136; South Carolina, 113; Georgia, 120; Alabama, 108; Mississippi, 104; Texas, 100; Arkansas, 102; Tennessee, 200; West Virginia, 104; Kentucky, 176; Ohio, 85; Michigan, 98; Indiana, 101; Illinois, 98; Wisconsin, 121; Minnesota, 150; Iowa, 119; Missouri,

MAYOR HALL.

His Trial in the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The Fraudulent Claims and Stolen Vouchers—Testimony of Deputy Controller Storrs—Andrew J. Garvey in Court.

The trial of Mayor Hall for neglience in not auditing fraudulent claims presented against the City, passed by the Board of Audit of which he was a member, was resumed yesterday before Judge Brady, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. The proceedings were rather uninteresting, and the witnesses of A. J. Garvey, who was expected to be called as a witness, was the only subject that afforded food for comment. The prosecution was conducted by District-Attorney Garvin, Hon. Lyman Tremain and W. H. Peckham; the defense by Mayor Hall, the defendant, Messrs. E. M. Stoughton, Buckley, Ira Schafer and A. J. Vanderpoel.

Richard S. Storrs, Deputy Controller of the City, testified that the defendant was Mayor in 1869; the paper shown him, signed by Mr. Hall and other members of the Board of Audit, authorizing payment of claims prior to 24th of April, 1870, was in his handwriting; Mr. Watson was Auditor when the vouchers were stolen from the Controller's office; these vouchers represented the bills of Isaac Sell, Garvey, &c.; the vouchers, on which were attached blank certificates, were signed by the Mayor and had the signature, "Wm. M. Tweed," Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, written across their faces.

On cross-examination by the defendant, the witness described the action of the County Auditor in regard to the vouchers. He saw the vouchers a few weeks before they were stolen; the Mayor called one day and went over the greater part of them, looking particularly at the certificates of audit; the Mayor's signature was wanting in some of the certificates of the Board of Audit attached to the vouchers afterward stolen. [The defendant read the documents which have been published.] Witness saw the vouchers or papers in the hands of the County Auditor passing through the Department at the time; did not make an examination of them; and did not remember their general character; a search was made for the vouchers, but they could not be found; on the day when the money was made for them they should have been in the custody of the City Auditor of Accounts; they did not pass through his hands, but the Auditor communicated directly with the Controller; it was not usual for them to pass through his hands; the subject matter they contained as claims for rent of buildings, &c., and had been audited under a special statute, or were supposed to have been, by the Controller alone, as head of the Finance Department; there was a large increase in the business of the Department in the months of May, June and July.

Q—Have you any personal knowledge whether the present members of the Board of Audit made personal examination into the claims presented, or whether it was made by deputy and warrant issued?

Mr. Tremain objected, and the question was excluded.

To Mr. Peckham—During the year 1870 the liabilities certified by the Controller amounted to $9,312,601, and in 1871 $105,196 31; the number of warrants issued in 1870 were 190, and five in 1871; I am acquainted with the signatures of Mr. Hall, Mr. Tweed and Mr. Connolly; the signatures upon the vouchers shown me are in the handwriting of the respective parties; the signature across the face of the bill is that of Mr. Tweed. The bills in evidence, as were others in the same way, including all those upon which the several counts in the indictment were founded. Several of the certificates did not contain the signature of the Mayor, and had only those of Tweed and Woodward.

The Mayor here expressed his disbelief in the genuiness of some of the signatures alleged to be his.

Mr. Storrs said he knew of no other vouchers in the office. The Mayor's signature was attached to four warrants, Nos. 2,516, 2,517, 2,518 and 2,519.

Mr. Peckham said that the sixteen warrants presented covered the claims of Keyser & Co. The vouchers of the Keyser warrants were produced for the reason that they had been taken off the file to be copied when the robbery took place.

Counsel presented a warrant for $6,150 41 drawn in favor of McB. Davidson for identification. He presented also warrant No. 2,305 (marked No. 24) to C. B. Botts & Co., for $125,126, dated Oct. 24, and warrant No. 2,782 (marked No. 23) and warrant No. 3,283, for $21,145, to the order of Ingersoll & Co. (marked Ex. No. 26.) Mr. Storrs testified that the signatures on this last warrant were genuine. Counsel also offered thirty-four warrants, the genuineness of all being admitted, Exhibit No. 3, for $32,000.

Stephen C. Lyons, County book-keeper, testified to the method of conducting the business in his department; he had heard of the stealing of some of the vouchers on the 11th of September; did not know that any of the county vouchers were used except those shown to him; thought the Mayor's signature to Exhibit No. 9 was genuine, and also exhibit No. 13; he would call exhibits Nos. 13 and 16 genuine, and the signatures to exhibits Nos. 19 and 23 genuine, though they look less like the Mayor's signature than those before shown; he would say that the signature to warrant No. 1,830 was a genuine signature; the warrants came in bundles to the office, City and County warrants together; the book produced by Mr. Peckham would not show all the warrants issued; there was another previous book, and probably other books before; he could not state from personal knowledge the number of the City warrants; they used to double them; the book to which witness has been referred had about 150 accounts; the heading of County liabilities differed from those matters of the Board of Audit; there are the various salary accounts, the charitable institutions, the rent claims, the Police Department, printing accounts, the Tax-office, &c.; all the multifarious business of the Finance Department is entered in this book, coming in numerous warrants signed by the Mayor; this was the routine from which there was no departure; before the Board of Audit the Board of Supervisors passed on the County liabilities, and the County Auditor examined them both before and after the Board of Supervisors; witness could not say how critically, but his stamp had to be put upon it just as it was subsequently on the Audit Board claims.

The Court then adjourned to 11 o'clock this morning.

THE INSURANCE CONVENTION.

Resignation of Secretary Olcott—Elections of Officers.

The sessions of the National Insurance Convention were continued yesterday, at the St. Nicholas Hotel, Commissioner Payne, of Maine, presiding. The States participating in the action of the Convention were Maine, New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, New-York, Pennsylvania, California, Kentucky, Indiana, North Carolina and South Carolina. The greater part of the time was devoted to perfecting the blank forms of statement for the returns of insurance companies to the State officials, as the best of variety, &c. The blanks in use during the past year, although they were said to be a great improvement upon previous ones, were found to be defective in many respects, and the new ones which have been drawn up are of a nature to deal with the great particularity the solvency of companies and the manner of doing business. At yesterday's meeting a communication was received from H. S. Olcott, Secretary of the Convention, setting forth that as the discussions of the proposed blanks had occupied the attention of a portion of the Convention to hold the future sessions of the Convention successively at the various State capitals, and as the character of the meetings was and would be entirely different from those already held—in fact, a mere social conference between State insurance officers—and as it would be inconvenient for him to follow the Convention to distant localities, he requested that his resignation as Secretary, which had been offered but rejected at the session of October, 1871, should be accepted. This communication was referred to a committee, who reported in favor of accepting the resignation. The report was adopted, and resolutions complimentary to Col. Olcott were passed, on motion of Mr. Foard, of California. A lengthy debate occurred on the necessity of placing the business of all insurance companies, whether domestic or foreign nationality, upon the same footing as regards supervision, and measures were taken to effect that result.

Before adjourning an election of officers for the ensuing year was held, which resulted in the choice of the following gentlemen:

President—Hon. L. Bronee, Secretary of State, Wisconsin.

Vice President—Hon. J. W. Foard, Insurance Commissioner, California.

Secretary—Hon. Oliver Pillsbury, Insurance Commissioner, New-Hampshire.

The next meeting of the Convention will be held at the State-house, Boston, on the third Wednesday of September, 1873.

Shipping Infringements Illegally.

In the case of George Parsons, of No. 12 Park place, dealer in toys, fancy goods and fireworks, charged with shipping fire-works on the steamer Charleston as fancy goods, Commissioner Betts yesterday denied a motion for the discharge of the prisoner. He said that the law requiring the marking of the cases had been only not been complied with, and that it is the duty of principals to see that their clerks obeyed the law. The defendant, he said, had failed to prove any effort whatever to have such articles marked in compliance with the law. Parsons was released on bail.

POOR JACK.

The Sailors' Boarding-House Keepers and the United States Shipping Commissioner—Extraordinary Demands of the Former.

The Seamen's Exchange, in Cherry-street, has had the usual course of business a little disturbed within the past few days by a combination of certain sailors' boarding-house keepers, who, finding their occupation of defrauding seamen destroyed by the operation of the recent act of Congress, are endeavoring to obstruct the execution of it. On several occasions last week delegations representing this combination waited on Commissioner Duncan to protest their demands, and these being steadily refused, they on Monday afternoon made a final visit, and, on receiving the same answer as before, threatened to do all they could to prevent seamen shipping from the Exchange. These then demand, first, that instead of the Commissioner examining all seamen who apply at the office for situations, he shall only examine those men staying at certain houses designated by the boarding-masters; and secondly, that instead of seamen being furnished with advance bills for wages, the amount designated shall be paid down in cash to the boarding-master at whose house the seaman may be living, who will then settle with the man himself.

To concede these demands would be to violate the Shipping act in its most essential provisions, and the Commissioner peremptorily refused to entertain them. The delegations becoming very hoisy and demonstrative, were ordered from the place and forbidden to enter it again. The boarding men have since been trying to prevent the shipping of seamen by the Commissioner, and though their opposition has not amounted to anything serious they have succeeded in causing some delay in the procurement of men. Two or three large packet ships have been detained a few days in consequence; but their crews are now completed. In another case, some of the runners of the boarding-houses frightened away the crew of a schooner, four or five men, who had shipped from the Exchange; but those fellows take particular care to keep out of reach of the law, and to counteract destructive manœuvres within legal bounds. They have organized a sort of vigilance committee to watch the Exchange and the men frequentingit; but the vigilants appear to keen well in mind that there is a Police station in the building, and if they have occasion for anything good watching, the Commissioner is not aware of it. It is understood that there are only twenty-five or thirty boarding-masters in this combination; some of the more honest men of this class are in favor of the new law, and work harmoniously with the Commissioner; and it seems evident that the confederation of the dishonest cannot last beyond a month or so.

Another matter which the boarding-masters and the "shipping masters," i.e., men whose business it has been to engage seamen from the forecastle, have caused some trouble about, is the engagement of men for coasting vessels, they claiming they had a right under the law to do this. The question has now been settled, by a decision, given by Judge McKenna, in the United States Circuit Court, at Philadelphia, in the case of The United States against James D. Idell, charged with shipping seamen contrary to the recent act of Congress. The decree states that the Shipping Commissioner has the exclusive right to ship and engage seamen for vessels bound to foreign ports; but that, in the case of coasting vessels, the act provides that the Shipping Commissioner, or the captain, owner, or consignee of such vessel, may ship and engage seamen; that as James D. Idell was none of these, and had engaged a seaman for the schooner J. W. Wescott, he was adjudged guilty of violated the act, and was fined $50 and costs of suit; in default of payment to be imprisoned, as provided by the act.

The Scott Monument.

The workmen of the Central Park have been busily engaged for the past few days in completing the local arrangements for the Walter Scott statue, which is to be presented by resident Scotsmen to the City of New-York next Saturday at 12 M. The pedestal has been built up, and yesterday the great box which contained the bronze was brought to the ground, unscrewed, and after careful muffling, the statue was delicately perched upon its destined place of honor. It is of colossal size, representing the great novelist in a meditative attitude, seated carelessly upon a rock, his plaid gathered about his shoulders and hanging down his left side. His faithful dog crouches at his feet on the right side. There has been a manifest endeavor to portray him as he was known when among men, even to his loose stockings and his low, easy shoes, tied carelessly with leather cords. In the face the same idea is still paramount, and while the great intellect of the man is not forgotten, the leading thought has been to make it a characteristic portrait. In other words, the artist has seen Walter Scott, the man, in preference to the glorified face of Walter Scott, the hero of the novelist. This figure, however, is a replica of the gray marble statue made by the same artist, John Steell, for the Scott Monument in Princes-street, Edinburgh, and perhaps there is a little too much of the material thereon which a conception which has been hailed with universal acclamation in Scotland has lost much of its significance and its beauty.

The pedestal is of a very beautiful pink Aberdeen granite, and is constructed as a simple pillar, the inscription alone plume on the front in the inscription, "Walter Scott." On the rear face are these words, in gilt letters:

"Presented to the City of New-York by resident Scotsmen and their sons on the 15th August, 1871, the One Hundredth Anniversary of the birth of Sir Walter Scott, Bart."

The Committee of Arrangements, consisting of Messrs. Richard Irwin, William Paton, William Wood, Robert Gordon, James Moir, Walter Watson, Bryce Gray, Robert Mackie, Robert Dawnidie, Alexander Knox, John Paton, A. M. Stewart, of the Scottish American, and Chief John Kennedy, sent invitations to the Municipal authorities and to the public schools. The Scottish societies will all attend, and the Seventh Regiment, which, by a great stretch of favor, has been permitted to enter the Park through Grand and Fifth-avenues. Dodworth's Band and the pipers of the protection will furnish the music. Mr. Richard Irwin will make the presentation to the City, and one of the Commissioners of the Park, perhaps Mr. Olmsted, will receive it. The address will be made by William Cullen Bryant. Seats will be placed on the spot by the Park authorities, but there will be no amphitheatre or platform as at the Shakspeare presentation. And those who are not early enough to secure a park chair must either stand or bivouac on the grass. The whole proceeding will not occupy more than an hour, so that standing will not be a very terrible martyrdom.

The price of the statue was 1,000 guineas, and the expenses of the whole affair will not exceed $12,000.

Improvements in the Neighborhood of Central Park.

Several weeks ago the Common Council passed an ordinance, as recommended by Commissioner Van Nort, and petitioned for by the property-owners, authorizing the Department of Public Works to improve Seventy-second-street, from the Women's Gate at the Central Park to the Hudson River as a macadamized road, thus making a park-way connecting the Central Park drives with the Boulevard and the contemplated Riverside Park and avenue. Work has been commenced, and is being vigorously prosecuted, so that the section between the Central Park and the Boulevard may be completed this season.

Commissioner Van Nort contemplates a similar improvement of One Hundred and Tenth-street, from Fifth-avenue to the Riverside Park and Avenue. This street is the northerly boundary of the Central Park, and legal proceedings to acquire the roadway will soon be commenced. When completed it will form the connecting link of a network of pleasure-drives of some twenty-six miles in length, including the Central Park drives, the Sixth and Seventh Avenues, the Avenue St. Nicholas, the Morningside and Riverside Avenues, and the Boulevard.

Burglars at Work.

At a late hour on Wednesday night the residence of S. H. Comber, No. 128 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, was entered by burglars, who forced open the basement door and succeeded in making their escape from the house, taking with them a quantity of wearing apparel, ornaments, &c., valued at $200. The Police have as yet failed to obtain any clue to the thieves or the property.

At an early hour yesterday morning an officer of the Twenty-ninth Precinct Police discovered the house of Mr. Jacobs, at No. 180 Fifth-avenue. The officer gave an alarm, and the burglars fled and succeeded in making their escape. The thieves had gained access by forcing open the rear basement door, and having ransacked the lower portion of the house, had collected and packed preparatory to removal, a large quantity of clothing and household articles.

The Clerks-Porter Situation.

In the case of William B. Clerks, jr., Richard S. Bates, to recover $20,000, the value of certain bonds alleged to have been misapplied by defendant, and in which the latter is held to bail, Judge Fancher, yesterday, denied a motion to vacate the order of arrest.

THE PRESIDENT.

The Tennessee Democracy and Greeley—The Confederate Pension-Roll in Tennessee—The Maynard-Johnson-Cheatham Contest.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Monday, Oct. 21, 1872.

Sixty days ago the Democracy of Tennessee were as intolerant and arrogant as in 1861. They then were confident of electing to the Presidency Horace Greeley. The great October battle in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and the triumph then won by the Republicans, have dispelled the delusions of July and August. But their hopes were high enough then to provoke them to adopt a policy that has brought dissensions and confusion into their organization. Inspired by the hope of a potent voice in the councils of the National Government after next March, the "military ring" of the Confederate Democracy determined to appropriate to themselves all the offices and emoluments the civil service of the State afforded. Accordingly they compiled what I call the "Rebel Pension-roll," or a list of all the valuable and prominent offices in the State, to which ex-rebel officers were to be chosen. In order that our friends North may understand how exceedingly conciliatory," modest and retiring these gentlemen are, I give below a list of a few of the candidates for the offices in Tennessee, with their former rank in the rebel army:

THE REBEL PENSION-ROLL IN TENNESSEE.

Ex-Major-Gen. John C. Brown, candidate for Governor; Ex-Lieut.-Gen. B. F. Cheatham, candidate for Congress at large; Ex-Major-Gen. W. A. Quarles, candidate for Elector at large; Ex-Confederate States Senator Landon Haynes, candidate for Congress, Ninth District; Ex-Col. A. J. Kellar, candidate for Congress, Ninth District; Ex-Gen. J. D. C. Atkins, candidate for Congress, Seventh District; Ex-Col. W. C. Travis, candidate for Congress, Seventh District; Ex-Col. E. J. Golladay, candidate for Congress, Fifth District; Ex-Col. D. M. Key, candidate for Congress, Third District; Ex (!) A. Caldwell, candidate for Congress, Second District; Ex-Gen. J. M. Bright, candidate for Congress, Fourth District; Ex-Gen. W. G. Whitthorne, candidate for Congress, Fourth District.

These are some of the ex-rebel officers now before the people for office. They want to "shake hands across the bloody chasm;" in fact, they are dying to do it. If the people won't shake hands with them they will do as bad off as Greeley is. I give now a list of ex-rebels in office. It will be noticed there are no private soldiers among them. It is a "ring" of "Brigadiers." Here are some of those now "pensioned:"

Col. J. L. T. Sneed, Judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

Col. P. Turney, Judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

Col. T. J. Freeman, Judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

Major R. McFarland, Judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

Major W. Morrow, State Treasurer.

Major James Glover, Superintendent State Capitol.

Gen. John C. Vaughn, Speaker Senate.

Major J. D. Richardson, Speaker House.

These men were put forward not so much because of their fitness for the positions to which they aspire, as because they served in the rebel army. The position of the Tennessee Democracy is thus set forth in a recent letter published by A. J. Ricks, Esq., of the Daily Chronicle of this city. In accepting an appointment as an elector for the State-at-large, he said:

No sensible man can reconcile the acts of the Tennessee Greeley Democracy with its professions. Wits one hand it tenders the olive branch to Horace Greeley and his Liberal allies, professing a sincere desire for reconciliation and a more fraternal union with the Northern people, while with the other it aggressively and knowingly repels from its ranks every man who was in sympathy with the Government during the war. While loudly complaining of opposition from the North, it is not proscribing every man in the State who was loyal to his country in the hour of its peril. While obscurely seeking to an unmanly degree to swallow Horace Greeley with all his obnoxious record for the professed object of cementing the Union, it puts forward as its candidates for every prominent office, men whose principal claim to office is that did all they could to disrupt that Union—puts them forward because of their rebel record, and chooses them in preference to better men of their own party whom they reject because they were Union men. Look over the list of the candidates put forward for Governor, for the State Legislature—and what a long array of Generals, Colonels, Majors, Captains, &c., do we find! In such proscription in Tennessee on the part of the Confederate wing of the Democracy consistent with some pretensions to the Northern "reconciliation!" It seems to me the Democracy of Tennessee should see this false position in which their overzealous leaders have placed them, and the ruinous effect with which such facts can be used against them.

These are facts that do not present the Democracy of Tennessee as sincerely anxious for "reconciliation," as Mr. Greeley and his friends represent. It is, however, just to a small portion of ex-rebel element to say that they do not approve of this proscription. They are liberal, and really want to inaugurate a more fraternal feeling between the sections. They are in the minority, however, and do not seem to make much headway in breaking down the hates and prejudices of their party.

THE BATTLE OF THE GIANTS.

The great interest in the campaign, now that Greeley's fate is sealed, is centered in the contest for Congress at large. The "military ring," to which I have referred, received on shelving ex-President Johnson. A few weeks before the assembling of the Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress at large, Johnson began a pilgrimage to Nashville, making Knoxville his first stopping point. Here he made a speech proclaiming he was not a candidate for any office. In the tactics of Andy this meant that he wanted the nomination. The Confederate element so understood it, and prepared to defeat him. A few days before the reunion of ex-rebel officers convened, Johnson made a speech at Nashville, in which he demanded amnesty for himself. He said that as President he had amnestied sixty-five thousand rebels. The man to mount Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress would carry in their pockets his pardon for their treason. He asked now for amnesty for himself. But his demand was unheeded. Gen. Cheatham had served the Confederacy, and though not very well fitted for such a position, he was chosen as the "regular nominee." Johnson thus defied, accepted the wager, and was put forward as the "people's" candidate. Hon. Horace Maynard, for fourteen years a representative in Congress from this district, was nominated by the Republicans. Quite a strong element opposed a nomination at all, but the Convention thought differently. It is a custom in Tennessee for all candidates to jointly discuss before the people, the issues of the canvass. This has been the practice here for many, many years. Johnson won his reputation in joint discussions years ago with noted politicians of the State. The debate in this case is really between Johnson and Maynard. Cheatham is not a talker, and, knows it. He has a short address written that he reads to the audience. This joint canvass has at least resulted in one good thing. It has been almost impossible, heretofore, to get the people to come out to hear a "Radical" speech. So great is the prejudice in the State that people have not even been willing to hear Republican principles defended. But in this joint canvass both of every shade of political belief come out and from Horace Maynard they hear a calm, dispassionate and able defense of the great Republican Party and of Grant's Administration. Impartial judges concede that Maynard is a match for Johnson in debate. Johnson, he is crisp, shrewd, sarcastic and eloquent. His speeches are unquestionably done great good, and for the first time since the war Republicanism has been successfully defended in Middle and West Tennessee before the classes referred to. Johnson's speeches are all about the same. He has great influence with the people, for he was long many as place the democracy most successfully. But there is little resource in him in such a canvass of this. He cannot stalk the cross fire and keep up his war-cry of the rebellion of the Confederacy. Maynard, for making a splendid address, winning friends every where and doing good.

The prospects are now that Johnson and Cheatham will divide the Democratic vote near enough to elect Maynard. Cheatham's friends are rallying his remains to his "organization," but I do not think they can drive Johnson men enough in their ranks to defeat Maynard. It is hard now to predict, but the course things are taking it seems probable that Maynard will be elected and that Cheatham will not have votes enough to beat Johnson. We have slim hopes of electing Col. Thorgersen from this district, and we will not probably carry the State for Grant, we will come near it. The Williams case in the Legislature; will receive a letter to Congress from the First District, and may gain one in the Third and Ninth Districts. OMEGA.

DELAWARE.

The Old-Time Democracy—Grant and Wilson to Carry the State—A Fair Chance for a Republican Congressman.

From Our Own Correspondent.

DOVER, Del., Monday, Oct. 21, 1872.

The small number of electoral votes to which Delaware is entitled causes her to be almost overlooked in estimating the chances of the respective candidates for the Presidency. When, however, she is noticed as all, it is generally to claim her as sure for Greeley, and this is natural especially in view of her heretofore incorrigible adherence to the most ultra Bourbon Democratic principles. Greeley has often defined the creed of Delaware Democrats to be "love rum and hate niggers," and her states men have ever boasted that the little diamond would be the last ditch of the Democracy. At the last general election in this State—November, 1870—this party was successful by a majority of 2,508, which, for a small State, was an overwhelming preponderance. It was natural, therefore, to set down Delaware as sure to go for anything that might be prescribed for her by those magnates who have heretofore ruled her populace with a rod of iron. To be sure, Greeley was a severe dose to be swallowed here, but then it was still thought that when the Cullenburs and the Bayards had yielded to the inevitable and ratified the work of their compatriots at Baltimore, there would be nothing left for the rank and file to do but to fall into line, and march under the mongrel banner. But for once their leaders presumed too far. Delaware Democrats don't sell out worth a cent. Indeed, they are repudiating Greeley by hundreds, and a tolerably careful canvass just made renders it almost certain that Grant and Wilson will carry Delaware by a very respectable majority; and, indeed, if the defection in their ranks goes on till the 5th of November at the same rate as for the last two weeks, it will give the Republicans not only the electoral, but the Congressional and legislative tickets besides. It is not Greeley alone that is sinking their craft. Thousands of honest Democrats are tired of the hide-bound policy of the two or three families that have used their power to keep down everything like progress and reform. And another favorable feature in the canvass for the Republicans is, that for the first time in several years the party is entirely united, and in the best of working order. Their electoral and Congressional tickets were put in the field at a mass Convention at Georgetown on the 10th of September. The nominee for Congress, Major Jno. R. Lofland, of Milford, is a man of good natural ability, and has many elements of popularity. The legislative ticket is also unusually strong. The canvass commenced vigorously soon after the Convention, and at the "little election" on the first of the present month, for Assessors and Inspectors—which usually furnishes a pretty good index to the result in November—the Democratic majority in the State was reduced to the trifle of eighty two! This showed the turn the tide had taken, and inspired the Republicans with new courage, and they are now pushing the canvass vigorously. Meetings are held daily in all parts of the State, and the ablest speakers of the party (and we have some as eloquent and able as the country can afford) are arousing the enthusiasm of the people as it was never aroused before. Lofland, the candidate for Congress; Hon. B. B. Smithers and Geo. V. Massey, Esq., of Dover; Dr. Wm. C. Davidson, of Milford, and Jacob Moore, Esq., of Georgetown, all eloquent and powerful champions of the cause, have been speaking almost daily for weeks past in Kent and Sussex Counties, and have engagements lasting to the close of the canvass. In Wilmington, and throughout New Castle County, the campaign is conducted with equal vigor—Henry F. Pickels, Chairman of State Committee, giving his best energies to its supervision. Meanwhile the Democracy are fearfully demoralized. They are split into factions and cliques, and no prominence for nomination for office or any other like Kilkenny cats. Their candidate for Congress is a puerile young man whom the Saulsbury "family" foisted on the party. Their candidates for the Legislature are the same little, narrow-minded cross-road politicians by whom they have been led for the Bench, and so badly disgraced these many years; and with all this unprecedented in the Greeley burden they are inevitably doomed to sink. "Progress and Reform" are the watch-words of the Republicans; "Waste Men's Party" that of the Greeley Democracy! The thing is too thin—the farce is ended! Delaware is redeemed, regenerated, and disenthralled, and henceforth takes her place with her loyal sisterhood of the Union; so in your next enumeration count Delaware for Grant, and carry the news to Horace.

ANNAPOLIS.

Mattery at the Naval Academy—The Case of Mrs. Wharton.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ANNAPOLIS, Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1872.

A compass was received this morning at the Naval Academy, a present from the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia. The compass is of Russian make, and came in five boxes, the one having the box of the compass in it taking two men to carry it, and a large polished walnut stand.

A Naval Board, consisting of Commodore Wm. E. Le Roy, President, and Capt. Wm. N. Jeffers and Commander J. A. Greer, will meet in this city on the 1st of November to examine midshipmen of the classes of 1869 and 1870 for promotion as ensigns. There are six of the class of 1869 and sixty-eight of the class of 1870.

Second Assistant Engineer Frederick Scholes has reported to the Naval Academy for duty as assistant in steam enginery.

Cadet Midshipmen H. A. Oswego and Wm. W. Riley have resigned. Two other "middies" who were concerned in the hazing last year and expelled, got in during the last examination. They were again given their secrets of leave.

The United States steamer Constellation, it is probable, will Winter here. Detachments will be sent from her to the Worcester and Hartford. The former is the flag-ship of the North Atlantic Squadron. The latter goes to the West Indies.

The trial of Mrs. Wharton, whose case attracted such general attention last year, for the alleged poisoning of Gen. Ketchum, now for the poisoning of Mr. Eugene Van Ness, will, it is confidently expected, take place this session of the Court. It is supposed it will commence about November. R.

The Seabrook Mystery.

In regard to the death of Nicholas Seabrook, of No. 123 East One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, who, it stated by his physician, Dr. Brockway, to have died from typhus fever, the primary cause being "ill-treatment on board the steamer Oceanic," we stated in the TIMES of yesterday, Mr. Benjamin Brown, of No. 2,240 Third-avenue, a brother-in-law of the deceased, stated that two days after the body had been interred, Dr. Brockway called on him in reference to the matter. After making inquiry as to the cause of death of Seabrook, he expressed regret that a post-mortem examination had not been held, "as it would have brought out sufficient data that would have fastened the responsibility on the proper parties." He said that "some one had blundered" in not having the certificate sent to the Coroner's office sooner; but that it was now too late to take any action in the matter. Mr. Brown continued, in a statement made by Dr. Beach that he, Beach, had called on Dr. Brockway in reference to the matter. The latter stated positively that Dr. Beach did not have any interview with him, nor had any communication passed between them on the subject.

The Henrietta Case—Examination Before Commissioner Stevenson.

The examination in the case of George A. Heinrich, the wealthy German living in Fifth-street, who was arrested on the 19th inst. for refusing to answer the questions of a Special Deputy-Marshal, was begun yesterday morning before United States Commissioner Davenport. Chas. J. Shaw, the Deputy on whose complaint Heinrich was arrested, was examined and testified that he lived at No. 180 Fifth-avenue; that he was a stockbroker. He asked Heinrich to please give him the name, which he did. He then asked his age, when Heinrich said he had answered those questions at the registry place, and would not answer again. Heinrich threatened to put him out, and whose fault. Shaw was cross-examined by Mr. Hirsch, after which an adjournment was had until next Thursday.

OLD HOUSES.

The De Lancey Mansion.

One of the best Governors that New-York ever had in the colonial times was William Burnet, the son of the famous Bishop. He was sent over the province from 1720 until 1728, and appears during that time to have pleased everybody. The secret of his popularity lay in his firm belief that the great families of the colony, who had so large a stake in its welfare were not likely to be bad advisers in colonial matters. As the son of an eminent churchman, he understood the influence which religion had over all questions, and in the choice of his advisers he was guided largely by the idea. His two specially trusted friends were Stephen De Lancey, the champion of the Episcopalians, and Mr. Livingstone, the defender of the Countryseat interests. Thus they conducted wisely in not to be doubted, since history attests in warm colors the progress made by the province at large, especially by New-York City, under Burnet's administration. These two families seem also to have prospered, especially the De Lanceys. It was during Burnet's Governorship that Stephen De Lancey built his great mansion at the corner of Duck-street, as it was then called, now Pearl, and Broad-street. Formerly a little creek had run up from the harbor through the centre of Broad-street, as high as the present Beaver-street. The Dutch, with vender memories of their old amphibious country, had turned this creek into a canal, called the Heere Graft, or Chief Canal, which was joined at the present Beaver-street by the Prince's Canal. Under the English administration these canals had been filled up and a dock built. Gov. Hunter, who preceded Burnet in the Gubernatorial office, built a fine stone quay a little below this dock, and Gov. Burnet added another one along side. The situation, therefore, of Mr. De Lancey's mansion when he built it, about the year 1724, seems to have been very suitable for a great merchant, and had the additional merit of being at no great distance from the Government House, which was on the side of the Whitehall dock, surrounded by high trees and spreading lawns. The water was then much nearer to the house than at present. The dock occupied what is now Water-street, or Broad-street. Subsequently it was filled up, and Little Duck-street, the dock being, so to speak, reached out a block. Again it was filled up, and its site was called Front-street, and this invasion of the water once more pushed back South-street to the City. The mansion therefore became difficult to reach by reason of the intervening population of the De Lancey mansion, but the founder was evidently in error in judging of the progress of the City. As the traffic of New-York increased, so did the mansion become more necessary, and in 1763 Oliver De Lancey, the son, sold it for $10,000 to Daniel Francis, a popular French caterer and the Delmonico of his times. Released it at first, but finding difficulty after ward in getting another tenant, he opened it as a tavern or restaurant in the year 1771. If Kirkpatrick continued, the great house of the De Lanceys had been built with an eye to hospitality on a grand scale, and it therefore answered the needs of its new occupation admirably well. Mons. Francis, who was so swarthy as to be generally known as Black Kate, had a knotty fancy for good food, and discrimination in the choice of wines. For himself the good host loved Burgundy, but the majority of his guests displayed that penchant for Madeira which became, in after years, a national characteristic. Even now the sturdy old cement walls of the Royal Pistole and Wm. F. Havemeyer, possess stores of the loaded amber beverage, which are priceless since the destruction of the Madeira vines. The ancient Madeira which Mr. Francis gave to his guests, was of a quality which, if it occasionally made the house very soon a centre of social life and conviviality. At this special time, when troublesome questions were before men's minds, and the terms loyal and disloyal were being bandied about, the tavern became the central meeting place where gentlemen of opposite opinions might meet in a friendly way. This came to a head in the Social Club, which assembled every Saturday night in the great room of the tavern, where years before the De Lanceys had entertained Governors and Councilmen. This Social Club numbered many of the leading merchants in the City, all loyal; but it also included such gentlemen as John Jay, the famous Republican Minister, Gouverneur Morris, Robert Livingston, Morgan Lewis and Gulian Verplanck. Many pleasant nights did the members of this social club, before hostilities became bitterness and bloodshed. As the troubles broke upon New-York, and Washington took up his head-quarters at Richmond Hill, The Asia, an English line-of-battle ship, though not a first rate, lay in the Whitehall; lower down, off Bedloe's Island, the Rainbow; pleasant waters of the harbor, and the bugles of the English troops sounded retreat and reveille on Staten Island. The Social Club was broken up in a measure, for the rich, loyal old merchants would not come, and spoke of Mr. Francis's place as the resort of Rebels. Black Kate, it was indeed, true, Mr. Francis was heart and soul with the patriots, and his tavern became a rendezvous for the gentlemen who affected the Colonial cause. For this reason, when the famous Capt. Isaac Sears had performed his exploit of hoisting the colors on a battery under the guns of Fort St. George, the Captain of the Asia, in a fit of rage, moved up to the shore and discharged a broadside at the tavern, one eighteen-pounder going through the roof. This was the signal for the rebel crowd to be suspected to be there—for the New-Yorkers of the lower order, who were patriots to a man, were greatly infuriated at this cowardly specimen of spite, and revenged themselves in as senseless a manner. They caught a boat which had supplied milk to the Asia, and sunk it, putting the crew in jail, needless of remonstrances or explanation. And now come the circumstances which will always throw a halo of genuine interest around this now wretched-looking place. Washington had his headquarters at Richmond Hill, and in consequence made of the town, and the housekeeper was Miss Phebe Francis, a daughter of the tavern-keeper. A plot had been formed by Gov. Tryon and David Matthews, the Mayor, to seize the City, and hold it for the British, and one night Tryon entered into the conspiracy was John Hickie, one of Washington's body-guard. He was an Irishman, a deserter from the British army, and apparently a devoted patriot. His willingness, his intelligence, and his soldierly appearance, had made him a favorite with the Commander-in-Chief, and among the inmates of Richmond Hill he was quite popular, from his sturdy and handsome face. He was carrying on an animated flirtation with Miss Francis, and believing himself entirely beloved by her, he on one occasion, when they were alone, told her of a way in which they could make their fortunes. She simply repeated this into the ear of the General. Miss Francis, thunderstruck, feigned compliance; but the same night told her father what had transpired. He requested her to assent to every thing that Hickie might suggest, but to communicate everything to him. He then immediately sought Washington, and revealed to him the infamous plot formed against his life. The General thanked him warmly, more for the country than for his own sake, and it was agreed that Hickie should carry out the Tryon conspiracy to the very end. So, on a certain day soon after, Hickie told Miss Francis that it was time, and she, on her part, under various pretexts, cleared the kitchen. Hickie slipped in and mingled some arsenic with a dish of green peas, of which Washington was particularly fond, and came out quietly with his face frightfully agitated. The dinner was served, the General having been warned by the housekeeper. After the soup and fish, which Washington discussed with appetite, though the other inmates were too agitated to touch a morsel, different dishes were brought in, and among them the poisoned peas. Washington nodded his head gravely, and said, "Send for Hickie." The miserable conspirator came in. "Shall I eat of these peas, Hickie?" said Washington, with a clear, unkindled voice. Hickie could not speak. His face was as pale as a dead man, but he nodded his head. "Give some to that dog," said Washington. It was done, and in a few minutes the poor creature was rolling in the convulsions of death. Hickie was arrested immediately, tried by court-martial, found guilty, and condemned to death. The execution took place in the Bowery-lane, not far from the present intersection of Grand and Chrystie-streets, in the presence of 20,000 spectators.

Hickie was hung on the 25th of June or beginning of July, 1776. On the 11th of September following the Hickie conspiracy the Cooper Boy Francis was far away. New-York was no home for him then, and he resolved to follow the army in the capacity of cellar. His fine nerves remained in the arms of the Britons who served it into officers' quarters. Many times during the struggle, and to the following day, the brave Frenchman's heart turn to his place in New-York. But though the night was so long, the dawn came at last. On the 1st of April, 1783, early in the morning, the American forces rode into New-York, and marched on the Harlem road, where the Cooper Institute now stands. Mr. Francis went on, and resumed possession of his old house, and as soon, when the English troops went sullenly to their ships and the American marched down to Whitehall and occupied Fort Lafayette, he opened Hickie's old quarters as the new famous tavern. Later on the same day he entertained his officers prior to bidding them farewell. Each one came and grasped him by the hand, kissing him on the cheek, as the fashion then was. But there was a more formal leave-taking at a public dinner, to which he was invited afterward. Gen. Washington was present at the same year, when the officers entertained him in the same grand old room. On the occasion he pronounced those affecting words which have passed into the history of the country. After speaking of the great work which had been accomplished, and of the great duties yet to be performed, he said, "I drink a bumper to the health of Mr. Francis, and I pick a bumper to Phebe Mose on his way to Mount Vernon."

Mr. Francis had become sincerely attached to the great man, who warmly reciprocated his feelings. He was not badly away from the Council, and when he was elected President, he asked him to be the Steward of the Presidential mansion, Francis accepted gladly, and sold the house. This was in 1785. With his departure departed also the romance of the place. It was first one thing, then another, but the story had departed from it, and it was continually sinking. It caught fire, and was completely gutted on more than one occasion. After the last fire it was materially changed in the rebuilding. As erected by Stephen De Lancey, the front on Broad-street had three floors and an attic, but the front on Duck-street (now Pearl) had an additional floor, the roof being what is called a hip-roof. The queer attic windows on the front

THE CENTRAL PACIFIC BONDS are quoted at all the principal Stock Exchanges of the world, and are held as the favorite American security in the European markets, where a large proportion of the entire issue has been absorbed. They are now comparatively scarce in this market.

THE WESTERN PACIFIC BONDS, payment of which is assumed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, by consolidation, and which are, therefore, equal in intrinsic value for investment to the above, we can usually furnish at something less than the current market price of Centrals.

THURSDAY, Oct. 24—P. M.

The sharp Gold corner of the last day or two was suddenly let up this morning, and the deliveries of the day were made without difficulty and at small cost to the Brokers who had contracts from yesterday to meet. After the settlements were made through the Gold Exchange Bank, the holders of Gold paid a moderate interest to carry over their balances in place of exacting a consideration on Tuesday and Wednesday for the use of their Gold. It is said today that the Bank of Montreal failed to reap the full advantage of the movement of the President, now in the City, of calling in the Gold of the Bank for some time lent on the Street. Other speculators in Gold, early posted about the movement, made the profitable choice of yesterday and the day before on the Gold which they had under control.

The bids made for Treasury Gold at noon today amounted to $6,695,000, of which $1,000,000 was awarded at 113 3/8 to 113.97 ₹ cent. The subsequent sales in the open market were at 113@113 ⅞ ₹ cent. The price of 113¾@113⅞ at the close off business last night fell this morning to 113@113⅛ ₹ cent., on the London news that the Bank of England had set, at the weekly Court of Directors, advanced the rate of discount—the repeated rumors said to be by Cable since last Saturday to the contrary notwithstanding.

This news and the easier supply of Cash Gold, that is of Gold for prompt delivery, were a relief to the Exchange market, and Bills on London were in better request at 2 ₹ cent. higher than yesterday. Some of the leading drawers were asking 109 ₹ cent. for 60 days Bills, but the sales of Monday were mostly at 108@108½ ₹ cent. The market left off steady, and with an improved feeling from the causes just referred to.

There was much activity on the Stock Exchange through the day, but with a shifting of favorite Stocks among the speculators for a rise. The Pacific Mail party, after allowing the price to open at 100½ ₹ cent., were supposed to be free sellers, and down to 99@99½ ₹ cent., or at all events after the price fell below par, some party or parties were bold operators to the amount of tens of thousands of shares from 99½ to 98½ ₹ cent. The Telegraph Stock was also inclined downward, but to no marked extent on actual sales. The Western Roads, some of them, suddenly became the Bull favorites, and North-west Common from 74½ ran up on immense purchases to 76½ ₹ cent. Ohios, St. Paul's, and C., C. and Indiana Centrals were firm and active. Lake Shore and Union Pacific and New-York Central rather neglected. The old Railway Mortgages were in good request in moderate lots, and the Southern State Bonds steady. The Public Funds were firm on the basis of 115½ ₹ cent. for the 5-20s of 1867.

Early in the day the Brokers were paying 7 ₹ cent. for Money on call. The rates at the close were 6@7 ₹ cent., and the supply apparently easy. Time loans on Stock collateral are dear and somewhat difficult, and the applications at Bank for Discount are generally ahead of the present ability of the Banks to accommodate their dealers. The reports from the Southern and Western Money markets are of pressure and dear rates.

This Afternoon, at the close of business, the following quotations for Stocks and Gold were made as compared with Wednesday night:

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Oct. 24.

Before Judge Barrett.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

Francis P. Byrne vs. New-York Central Underground Railroad Company.—This is an action to enforce a contract to build a portion of the Underground Railroad which was chartered in 1866. The Company, it appears, never went into active operation or obtained the right of way, and plaintiff claims that he has made a tender of performance, and has enlisted force to enforce its benefits against the Company. A demurrer was interposed on the ground that the complaint did not set forth a demand of facilities to fulfill his contract; decision reserved.

Department of Public Works.

The opening of proposals for public works, including grading, paving and sewering streets, and laying underground drains in various parts of the City, was completed today by Commissioner Van Nort, the Controller being present. This is the last public letting by the Department of Public Works during the present season, as the resolutions of the Departments made in pursuance of the Ordinance of the Common Council prohibit work on most of these improvements from the 1st of December to the 15th of April.

Notice.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. We cannot under any circumstances return rejected communications nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

Register today. There are from forty to fifty thousand legal voters of this City whose names have not yet been placed on the books of registry. The larger proportion of these are reform voters, and if the cause of good government is defeated on Tuesday week, it will be because thousands of its friends were too busy or too lazy to go to the place of registration for their district and qualify themselves to vote. Fifty millions of dollars of public money, stolen or squandered would have been saved had "respectable" people not shirked the duty of voting, and left Tammany to unchecked cheating at the polls and unbridled corruption in office. New-York will become the scorn and the reproach of the Union if honest voters begin to betray their political trust once more. Register today, so that you may cast a vote for reform on Nov. 5.

The Apollo Hall nominee for City Judge—JOSIAH SUTHERLAND—deserves a place on every reform ticket. It is of vital importance that every citizen who sincerely desires the purification of the local Bench should be united in the support of a single candidate for the City Judgeship. GUNNING S. BEDFORD has disgraced a position for which he is conspicuously unfitted, by engaging in a most undignified and improper personal canvass to retain it. This sort of thing should be rebuked by a sweeping popular verdict against him in November, and no man is better fitted to secure the votes of all citizens who respect the dignity and purity of the Bench than JOSIAH SUTHERLAND.

One of the Greeley organs in Westchester County is puzzled over the fact that Mr. JAS. W. HUSTED enjoys Democratic favor. It is hardly "one of the inexplicable mysteries of politics," and proceeds on the well-known principle of a lively sense of favors to be conferred. HUSTED has done a great deal of work for the Democrats, which gentlemen of sensitive consciences won't do, and he expects to do more. He has a glib tongue, facility in the trickery of legislation, and knows when "thrift may follow fawning." To be sure, he calls himself a Grant Republican, but the Republicanism which can be put on and off like a mask doesn't frighten or offend the Tammany men. They know, however he may appear, exactly what he is.

This is the last day but one for registration. Don't put off till to-morrow what can be done today. Find out the place of registry for your district, and get your name placed on the list before you go to business this morning. Remember every vote will tell this year. Our next election will be the nearest approach to an absolutely fair one that New-York has seen for many years. But we shall only have dropped out of one evil into another, if we are to have against us instead of the frauds of our enemies, the apathy of our friends. You must be registered, else you cannot vote. See, then, that you claim your franchise as eagerly as if the destinies of City, State and Nation depended on your individual vote.

The Danger of Being Too Sure.

Disappointed in every other expectation, the Greeleyites have but one hope left, and that is in the overconfidence of their opponents. Demoralized as are the forces of the coalition, they are gaining fresh courage every day from the impression which has taken root in the public mind that the battle is over, and that there is no further use of maintaining the semblance of fighting a foe who has become impotent for further mischief. The tide of a campaign has been turned before now, both in the struggle of actual warfare and in that of politics, by the rash assumption that a beaten enemy was as good as no enemy at all. The true crisis of the fight has not yet been reached, and it is the most suicidal folly to suppose that the Republican Party can afford to disband its forces and leave its strongholds without defence, while its opponents are eagerly watching for just this opportunity to cheat it out of an overwhelming victory. A great deal depends, be it remembered, on the decisiveness of the triumph in November. The unprincipled leaders of one of the most corrupt and dangerous coalitions known to our political history must get such a lesson at the polls as can neither be misapprehended nor explained away. The future relations between North and South, the successful carrying out of the great work of a true and lasting restoration of national unity, and the undisturbed prosecution of measures of administrative reform—all imperatively demand that the vindication of political principle against time-serving expediency should be very complete on the 5th of November. The October elections were rightly accepted as a sure earnest of victory, but only of victory achieved by the same means that carried the test States—unfaltering energy, and hard, honest work.

We trust that our friends in this City are not going to incur the grave responsibility of exposing the Republican triumph in the State to needless and hazardous risks, by supposing that a few thousands more or less on the vote of November are of no possible consequence. While they are idly waiting, the opposition is working tooth and nail to spring a surprise upon them when they least expect it. It would be a lasting disgrace to the Empire State, should its influence on this eventful struggle be thrown away by the confidence without effort of its Republican voters. We are a busy enough community, but it would pay to leave a good many things alone, if they are to be attended to at the expense of the national and local interests, which depend upon our verdict at the approaching election. After all, the demands upon the time of the ordinary voter are of the lightest possible character. First, place your own name on the registry, and then take some pains to see that your friends have done likewise. Then, on Tuesday week, record your vote early, and impress upon every one enlisted in the same cause, the necessity of following your example. But, remember, if you fail to register, you have forfeited your right to vote. If the first step has not already been taken, let it be done today at some time between the hours of 8 A. M. and 9 P. M. Our friends of the up-town districts have been sadly negligent, so far, in the duty of registration. We trust to be able to record, to-morrow morning, that this charge cannot be repeated.

Candidates for the Assembly.

Both parties have nearly completed their Assembly nominations. Those of the Republicans are in the main good; those of the Democrats are in the main bad. Of the members of the last Assembly, some of the most sterling worth on the Republican side have been renominated and will be returned. Thus the St. Lawrence County delegation, consisting of Messrs. MOORE, LYNDE and ROSS, will all go back, to the credit of their constituents and the advantage of the State. This is true also of Messrs. BAILY and ALBERGER, of Erie, as stanch men as were in the last Assembly. Mr. TOREY, of Essex, to whose services on the Insurance Committee the community and the insurance interests are incalculably indebted, is renominated and will be elected. Mr. PRINCE, of Queens, the able and indefatigable Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, will be chosen without opposition. He was largely, if not chiefly, instrumental in the impeachment of the Judges last Winter—the one triumph of the session, and as great a triumph as any Legislature ever won.

In this City, Mr. PELL, of the Ninth District, an industrious and upright member, has been nominated. He is opposed by one WM. H. DOUGAN, who has the "Liberal" nomination, as well as that of Tammany; but any respectable man in that district who has ever been a Republican, and who fails to vote for Mr. PELL, deserves to feel in his own person and pocket the worst effects of corrupt legislation. In the Seventeenth District, Mr. CHAS. A. FLANDERS is named again. He also was a faithful member of the last Assembly, and an active member of the Judiciary Committee. He deserves a re-election.

In the Eleventh District, Mr. A. B. CORNELL, whom the Tribune elegantly calls a carpet-bagger, because he once lived in Ithaca, is named by the Republicans. He is a gentleman of unblemished reputation, whom even the professional libelers of the Greeley party have found nothing against, and he accepts the nomination to the Assembly at great personal sacrifice. The office seeks him, not he the office. In this connection, we should mention also the nomination of Mr. HENRY R. PIERSON, formerly State Senator from Kings County, in the Second District of Albany County. This is the district represented so creditably last year by Mr. HENRY SMITH, the Speaker. Mr. PIERSON will prove an excellent successor to Mr. SMITH.

Against these good nominations, we regret to say some bad ones must be set off. Those of C. P. VEDDER, in the First District of Cattaraugus—a very shaky member of the Judiciary Committee; of JACOB WOERTH, in the Sixth District of Kings County, and of JAMES W. HUSTED, in the Third District of Westchester, are not fit to be made. VEDDER and HUSTED have a bad "record" in the last Legislature; WOERTH is a man of utterly unfit character for the important post he aspires to—and has proved it.

As for the Democrats, how much they care for reform may be estimated by their choice of candidates for the Assembly. Look at the list in this City: JAS. HEALEY, "DENNY" BURNS, JAS. DUNPHY, "JIMMY" HAYES, "MIKE" NORTON, "TIM" CAMPBELL, "BILLY" COOK. What could be worse? These men are not only bad—they are notoriously bad. Any Republican deluded into voting for them on account of any "Liberal" indorsement, is worse than a fool. Outside of the City it is no better. Take ALVORD, of Onondaga, the leader of the anti-reform Ring in the last House; FRANK ABBOTT, of Orange; E. K. HART, of Orleans; A. M. BLISS, of Kings—these are the kind of men the Democrats have borrowed from the Liberals to match the Campbells, Nortons, and the like. Some of them may be elected, but we shall have them under their true colors, and shall know what to do with them. Their loss is a gain.

Our Duty to Other Cities.

A great city sets a great example. The effect of either success or failure in the reform movement here will not be bounded by the Hudson and East Rivers. New-York is not only the largest city on the continent, but is by far the best known, even in proportion to its size. What we do in regard to our Municipal administration has an influence for good or evil on the management of affairs in other cities, incomparably greater than what is done in any other place in America. Our newspapers go everywhere. The names of prominent City officials and candidates for office here are as familiar to not a few men in Boston, in Philadelphia, in Baltimore, in Cincinnati, in Chicago, in St. Louis, and even in New-Orleans and San Francisco, as the names of their own. The history of the recent struggle against corruption here is known in all those cities, and if that struggle shall ultimately be unsuccessful, its failure will be known also.

If one of our large mercantile firms should deliberately employ clerks who would be certain to lose no opportunity of cheating and plundering their employers, it would evidently be not only an act of folly in relation to the firm itself, but a great wrong to the community. Business men would justly look upon such an example as highly deleterious, and upon the conduct of such a firm as a most criminal connivance at dishonesty. We are unable to see why a similar principle does not apply to the voters in whose power is the appointment of officers intrusted with Municipal finances. Even if the people of New-York have a preference for needlessly heavy taxation and debt, they have no right to indulge this preference by sumptuously maintaining a den of thieves. Simply to allow gigantic and unblushing fraud to pass with impunity is bad enough; but to honor and reward it is still worse; and deliberately to give opportunities for its continuance is worse than either. There is not a city or village in the United States, in which any efforts to prevent dishonesty in its officers would not be seriously retarded if the Ring should regain its power in New-York. And on the other hand, there is not a municipal government, however small or however remote from us, in which the influence of a thoroughly honest City administration here would not be eminently beneficial.

If the question before the voters of this City in electing their officers were merely whether the waste and fraud which formerly prevailed, were to be renewed, it would be in itself a momentous inquiry. The burden of sustaining such an expense is no small matter, even for a great metropolis like ours. But the election of our City officers involves more than this, important as it is. If we deliberately allow ourselves to be plundered, we give a sanction—and not a very indirect one—to similar plundering everywhere. Nor is this all. The evil of such an example will not stop at dishonesty in regard to public funds. Its moral influence will necessarily run through all business relations, and especially will its effect on the integrity of young men be seriously felt. Every one in New-York, therefore, who votes against the reform movement, gives his influence toward rendering property insecure, and toward impairing the moral sense of the community, not only in this City, but throughout the land, in reference to honesty in pecuniary affairs.

A man who willfully does anything toward rendering rascality respectable in the eyes of the young men of this country incurs a fearful responsibility. And the fact that he does this in company with thousands of others, does not diminish that responsibility. A vote in commendation of fraud is a voice in contempt of honesty. If the young men of the United States are to be told by the people of New-York on the 5th of November, that, in the judgment of the latter, there is nothing wrong in embezzlement and false accounts, but that, on the contrary, they are things deserving of encouragement and reward, it will be a disaster to the moral welfare of the community, even greater than the loss occasioned by such a vote to the pecuniary interests, immense as that loss in such a case would be.

Gen. Hawley for Congress.

Gen. JOS. R. HAWLEY has been nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the First Connecticut District, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late member, Mr. STRONG. The district is a close one, Mr. STRONG having carried it in 1869 by 726 majority, and in 1870 by 297. Against Gen. HAWLEY the Democrats have named Mr. EATON, long known as the leader of the extreme Democracy, in hopes that his pronounced Bourbonism will keep in the ranks the large number of Democrats in the district who do not take kindly to "toting crow."

Both men are of excellent private character; both have energy and ability, and talent as public speakers. But no Republican, "Liberal" or otherwise, can find any sound reason for preferring EATON to HAWLEY. Gen. HAWLEY has not only always been an active supporter of Republican principles, but he has held his principles from deep conviction, has devoted to their advancement the best years of his life, and has honored them by the intelligence, candor, and thoroughness with which he has studied them. Always a "worker," he is in no sense a professional politician. He has urged his party on, not followed it merely, and will be found in Congress always with those who think the only way to keep political power is to use it with conscientious regard to the needs of the country. Whatever new issues our party will have to face—and there will certainly be new ones—Gen. HAWLEY will meet them with mature judgment and disinterestedly.

He is, moreover, admirably fitted to exert an excellent influence in the House of Representatives. He is well-informed, a ready speaker, persuasive in manner, and widely known and respected. The Republicans of his district ought to make Gen. HAWLEY's election absolutely sure.

Middle-Age Cookery.

New-York, we all say, is getting to be very cosmopolitan. Her houses and her theatres, her tastes and her habits, are taking on the air of Old World capitals—in fact, so to speak, of an agglomerate of capitals, since here we have numbers of people from nearly all the great cities abroad, who bring the ways of their former homes across the sea with them. From this novel state of things, in which a vast metropolis is made up, not of Americans only, but of Germans and Irish and British and French, Italians and Spanish, Swedes, Danes, Poles, Africans, with a sprinkling of Chinese, Japanese, and Turks, arise some inconveniences and some valuable advantages. Among the latter, it might be supposed that eclectic modes of cookery would spring up, wherein all the best customs of the various nations might be combined into one harmonious whole, and a system thus produced which in its entirety should be superior to any of its parts.

Not only do the diverse nationalities, but the markets of New-York, favor such an expectation. Here we get everything, or next to everything, to be had in all the markets of the world. The turtle that the Frenchman will not eat, and the frogs and snails that he will; the finest terrapin, lobsters, oysters, crabs, and clams to be found in the sea; shad, bluefish, smelts, and other piscatory luxuries, finer than elsewhere; game and meats, to produce which millions of square miles are laid under contribution; green stuffs, for salads, of endless luxuriance and variety; vegetables which are absolutely unsurpassable; fruits which, whether from the soil of New-Jersey or California, are becoming almost fabulous, alike in bulk and quality; strange yet delicious food not known, or little known, out of America—such as the hump of the buffalo, the delicate flesh of the antelope, and other choice morsels, which, like our green corn and tomatoes, are little liked by Europeans at first, but afterward are cherished with lasting affection; these and many more articles of food are all at hand to furnish unequaled material for what we may style the Cuisine of the Future; but our trouble is, it is not the Cuisine of the Present. We have restaurants and hotels perhaps equal to any in the world. There are private houses wherein the table, whether for delicate taste or profuse variety, is probably unsurpassed. But we speak in behalf, not of the more opulent classes or their resorts, but of the middle orders as regards purse, the cultivated people of moderate incomes. For these our civilization is certainly not yet what it should be. We may be ever so cosmopolitan, progressive, and modern in other things, but in this we are still far behindhand, and our cookery, as adapted to the persons named, is little better than that of the Middle Ages.

In cities like Paris, Vienna, and Berlin, cities with not half our facilities, a good dinner can be got, well prepared, cleanly served, in places thoroughly unobjectionable, for one-fourth the sum such a meal costs in New-York. The illustration applies to pretty much all our eating and drinking, and is a type of what, in a republic, is a very anomalous fact. This is the fact that, broadly speaking, our eating-houses are either only for the very rich or the very poor. The wholesome and reasonable mean between the two is comparatively unknown. Unless you can pay for the best of everything, you will, for the most part, have to put up with the worst. Of course, there are exceptions. There are housewives and housewives, and by luck a stranger may fall on his feet. But let him pass through our streets and take the chances for his meals, as he may have done in Paris, and he will find our statement amply verified. The trouble is analogous to what we have witnessed in the matter of houses and rents. It is easy to find splendid mansions in New-York, with every conceivable luxury and convenience, and it is easy to find cheap boarding-places and "tenement"-houses. But the cleanly, convenient, and not inelegant apartments, in decent situations, and adapted to moderate purses—the accommodations that French and other "flats" are meant to supply—have hitherto been more rare, and even now are only beginning to meet the demand. By and by the evil will be remedied, and people can get exactly what they want in the shape of lodgings at the price they are able to pay.

The same kind of provision is requisite in the matter of dinners and cookery. Restaurants where the linen is clean and the butter sweet, where a really well-cooked chop or a fillet can be had for a reasonable price, where good tea and coffee are regular certainties, and sound wine is furnished for a small profit, are fully as much needed here as French "flats," and like apartments, and for much the same sort of people. We are aware, of course, that establishments in fashionable quarters cannot pay rent on any such system as this—and DELMONICO's is one of the cheapest houses in the world, considering how good everything is, and the high cost of labor, rent, &c.—but it is easy to find plenty of room in less expensive and showy localities, and, in such, good profits can be made from the custom of people who care most for the solid part of the business, and who, in fact, cannot afford to pay for anything else.

The Reward of Merit.

Sympathy is one of the most beautiful of human emotions, but, unless its expression is controlled and directed by a right judgment, it is apt to degenerate into absurdity or worse. It is the misdirection, or, perhaps we should say, the morbid manifestation of this quality which makes ordinary juries so loath to convict women murderers, and which often makes French juries reluctant to convict of murder at all. But of misplaced sympathy there has rarely been a more extraordinary exhibition, or a more sudden and ludicrous subsiding, than in a recent instance in England. There, indeed, it was not an assassin, but his victim, that was the object, but, even with this advantage at starting, the natural talent of the sympathizers enabled them to be as ridiculously unnatural as a California jury itself.

Among the many mysterious murders which, during the past year or two, have agitated the British public, was one of a servant girl named JANE MARIA CLOUSEN, known generally as the "Eltham tragedy." For this crime the son of the girl's employer was at once suspected, arrested, tried, and eventually acquitted, as many of his neighbors seemed to think, wrongfully. They therefore expressed their disapprobation of the unrighteous verdict in various unique and striking ways, such as parading to the number of several thousand in front of the prisoner's house, with black flags and others inscribed with the cheering device, "Blood," by hooting vigorously, and, finally, by breaking all the windows in the house, not only of the prisoner, but of his counsel also. Afterward "from righteous rage to tender pity turned," they held a grand mass-meeting, where many speeches were made and resolutions passed, violently eulogistic of the murdered girl, and a monument was voted to her memory. This curious exhibition of bathos was made, be it remembered, not by ignorant or unthinking people, but by persons of education and culture, and many of them of professional distinction.

This occurred about a year ago, and at the time we pointed out the absurdity of conferring a distinction, usually reserved for extraordinary merit, on a person whose particular and by no means uncommon merit it was to have died a violent death. Apparently the projectors of the folly have now accepted the same conclusion. The proposed monument was actually ordered, and directed to be of the most elaborate manufacture. The commission was given to a certain Mr. HORNE, of Newcross, who forthwith produced the following work of art, according to the account we find in an English paper:

"The monument is of Portland stone, and is a square molded tomb, with four marble panels, surmounted by a dome resting upon four small pillars. Beneath this dome it was, and is now, proposed to place a marble figure of the murdered girl. Upon one of the marble panels the following inscription has been engraved:

'In memory of Jane Maria Clousen, a motherless girl, who was murdered in Kidbrook-lane on the night of Tuesday, the 26th of April, 1871. She was taken to Guy's Hospital, where she died on Sunday night, the 30th of April, aged seventeen years. She was gentle and respectful in manner, amiable and affectionate in disposition. Her last words were, Oh, let me die.

'May God's great pity touch his heart, and lead
My murderer to confess his dreadful deed,
That when the secrets of all hearts are known,
Guilt and repentance may alike be shown.'"

This touching memorial was to have been paid for by private subscription, but when it came to putting out money, instead of resolutions, public enthusiasm seemed rapidly to have weakened, and Mr. HORNE has been compelled to bring suit against the Committee who gave him his instructions. If the sturdy stone-cutter gains his cause, we may agree with the sage dictum of a local paper, which gravely concludes that "it is difficult to imagine to what use the tombstone will be put, as the Committee who are stated to have ordered the execution of the work are said to have quite relinquished any idea of carrying out their original intention."

As an instance of the sort of mistake into which people who ought to know better may be led by yielding to a generous but injudicious impulse of compassion, this singular history seems worthy to be recorded. If every victim of an unavenged murder is to be straightway adjudged the immortality of marble, the land would speedily groan under the weight of mortuary monuments.

Mount Vernon.

Among the vergers of Westminster Abbey there lingers the tradition that a lady of mature years once visited the Abbey, (and violently upbraided its guardians because of their neglect to scour its monuments with sand, and to cleanse its walls and columns with soap. To this indomitable opponent of dirt the Poet's Corner was a disgrace to English civilization, so long as it was open to the slightest suspicion of spiders, or gave to the most delicate nose a hint of dust. It is painfully evident that this crusader of cleanliness and order has

JOHN A. DIX.

Reminiscences of the General by His Townsman.

We esteem ourselves most fortunate in being able to offer the editors of the veracious Tribune, the unchangeful World, and the ingenuous Journal of Commerce, some emanations from their sympathetic bosoms in former years as a soothing balm for the sorrows brought upon them by the elections in Vermont, Maine, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and a few other States. What a grateful illustration of the pleasures of memory it must be to them to look back through the lapse of years and the long vista of their instructive columns and find such ardent effusions of feeling as we are about to present to them in favor of the Republican candidate for Governor! We can "change their feelinks," as Mrs. Gamp would say, and we profer them the tribute of our tenderest sympathy.

When Gen. Dix returned from Washington in March, 1861, after his brief and brilliant administration of the Treasury Department, the Common Council of the City gave him a reception in the Governor's room. Mayor Wood delivered a congratulatory address, and between two and three hundred of our prominent citizens tendered him a public dinner, which he declined. Few men have ever been received in this City with such demonstrations of respect from all classes.

The newspapers, without exception, we believe, participated in rendering him the honors which were conceded to be his due.

The Tribune of the 15th March, 1861, spoke out in the following strain of eulogium:

"The cordial reception of the late Secretary of the Treasury yesterday, by his fellow-citizens without distinction of party, shows how pluck and patriotism are yet appreciated in the North. Notwithstanding the persistent attempts of traitorous demagogues and servile presses to corrupt and pervert public sentiment, New-York, with one heart and one voice, greets Gen. Dix thus warmly, not only because of the ability and honesty with which, in a trying and perilous crisis, he administered the financial department of the Government, but because of the determined energy which led him to rise above the general imbecility of the Administration, and send his memorable order to the United States commander in the South: 'If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot.' Except the movement of Major Anderson from Fort Moultrie to Sumter, that was the only indication through long and dreary months of treason on the one hand and weakness on the other, that courage and spirit had not entirely died out among those to whom the people had intrusted the national honor and authority.

It is as a Democrat, so standing forth in marked and favorable contrast with most of the leaders of his party, that we applaud the good sense, the patriotism and the independence with which Gen Dix has borne himself in the present crisis."

In describing his reception at the City Hall, the Tribune said:

"Gen. Dix is a man of medium height and size, compactly built, with an organization indicating a combination of great activity and powers of endurance. * * * Decision is stamped in every lineament, and he would seem to have been just the man to say: 'If any man attempts to haul down the American flag,'" &c.

The Journal of Commerce, of the same date, is equally ardent in Gen. Dix's praise. Of his assumption of the duties of Secretary of the Treasury, it says:

"The circumstances were such that nothing but the most lofty patriotism could have induced him to enter upon the task thus brought to his hands. He did not, however, hesitate, but promptly undertook the work of bringing order out of confusion, redeeming the public credit, and supporting the President in the difficult task of maintaining the public honor and peace, and averting a civil war.

How well these duties have been discharged the public need not be informed, since the circumstances are familiar to all. Perhaps no statesman has ever achieved, in so brief a space and under such a complication of difficulties, more honorable results."

And yet the same Press said, in substance, a few weeks ago, if we remember rightly, that Gen. Dix had been a failure in every public place he had filled.

But it is in the columns of the World that we find the most ardent effusions of feeling. On the 7th of March, 1861, it commended the design of giving Gen. Dix a public dinner, as an acknowledgment of "his vigorous, sagacious, and truly patriotic administration of the Treasury Department."

"We cannot see how Gen. Dix can be allowed to escape without disgrace to the City. He certainly merits the highest compliment that can be paid to a civilian. From him came the first order which showed that power and patriotism had not quite died out together at Washington. He, first of our public officers, endeavored to protect the honor of our flag," &c.

On the 15th of the same month it said of the dinner tendered to Gen. Dix:

"Men of all parties would gladly have united in this demonstration, but it was gracefully, though firmly declined.

His administration was brief, but it was able and efficient, and especially luminous by contrast with that of the precious batch of traitors who had just left the Government helpless and bankrupt. He has done what honesty and ability could in the wreck of affairs which they left behind them."

But it was in reference to Gen. Dix's appointment as Major-General that the World was most rapturous in its eulogiums. On the 8th of May, 1861, its enthusiasm gushed forth as follows:

"Rarely do the office and the man confer such fitting honor upon each other as in the case of the Major-Generalship of the New-York forces, which has been proffered to and accepted by the late Secretary of the Treasury, known to the public by the military title which he bore so creditably years ago, and which he now officially resumes; accomplished in letters as well as in arms; prominent for some time past among the highest class of politicians in the great unbroken Democratic Party; cautioning a vigorous administration of the involved affairs of the New-York Post-office as the call of the country that he should save its expiring credit, he is now thought of by his fellow-citizens, not only as the man who accomplished this task with a success, which in itself would have won distinction, but as the public officer who first gave an order to protect the honor of that flag which is the symbol of the nationality that we have all sprung up in arms to defend. His words, 'If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot,' first made public in these columns, flew from lip to lip, and, flashing along the wires, first broke the spark of that patriotic fire that now flames through the land. It is well; it is becoming; decus et decorum est; he who issued that order should receive the highest command which his State has to bestow among the defenders of that flag, the sacred inviolability of which he was so prompt and so determined to maintain. He moves with equal grace and promptness from the study to the exchequer, and from the exchequer to the field. Tum morte quam Mercurius."

Glowing as is the foregoing, we have no fault to find, except with the bad Latin with which it concludes, and which it is difficult to account for but upon the hypothesis that the scholars of the World must have been defrauded of their due share of birch in their classical course.

To be serious, no public Press has been more scurrilous in its abuse of Gen. Dix, or more unscrupulous in its attempts to falsify history, than the World. It gave him no credit for abandoning the New-York Post-office to hold the Treasury Department for six weeks to which upon himself a most trying and laborious service, but said that Mr. Lincoln would have dismissed him from the former if he had remained in it. It attempted to rob him of the merit of the order which it eulogized in terms the most enthusiastic, by ascribing it first to Mr. Stanton, and then to Mr. Buchanan, and when convicted of falsehood by Stanton himself it said there was not much in the order after all. The World has a lamentable record for inconsistency in numberless cases, though in none more shameful than this. The high estimate of Gen. Dix's character and services by the Presses from which we have quoted, at a time when they had no motive to be untruthful, will not be lost on honest voters, notwithstanding the traverstitions and defacations of his slanderers.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

Lecture at the Cooper Institute by Miss Faithfull—A Large and Attentive Audience.

The name of Miss Emily Faithfull is better known to the London public than here; but her efforts to enlarge the sphere of employment for her sex have brought her late prominence, and attracted attention on both sides of the Atlantic. These efforts have received warm encouragement and support from Queen Victoria, who formed the subject of Miss Faithfull's lecture at Cooper Institute last night. A large and attentive audience was gathered in the main hall of the building, and crowded Miss Faithfull with hearty applause.

When she had subsided, she said: English people have a strange objection to hasty innovations and unpleasant theories, and so, probably, there were still among the people some who believed in the divine rights of kings. The lecturer could only say she was not one of them. In speaking of the feeling known as loyalty, she hoped it would not be considered to be the same as flunkeyism, or that snobbishness which has been so keenly dissected by the genius of Thackeray. There were various kinds of loyalty—the fine old style that Thackeray might have admired; the philosophic loyalty; the temperate loyalty, founded on historical ideas; then the loyalty of our republicans, which is a sect of sobriety; and lastly, the name of the present feeling of loyalty, which grows out of the national feeling of humphumbugness, and induces the people who share it to look patronizingly on the royal state as something they pay for and are proud of. The royal institution is regarded with satisfaction because they consider that it works well; and if rather costly, still it is better to keep it than to make uncertain changes. There was an element of personal attachment to the Queen in the regard of the English people for her; and the speaker thought she could prove that this royal lady was worthy of it. (Applause.) The Queen's life has just been the life which Englishmen love to contemplate. Called by a sudden change of fortune to a position, she, as we see when most rude are swinging the skipping-rope, she began by winning the love of her subjects, and she has never lost it. The actual life of the Queen began with her marriage, and Albert, afterward to be known as Albert the Good, was every way calculated to lead to the growth of love the fancies of the young sovereign. The whole of her reign was bound up in the Prince Consort, for, though he was now dead, the whole present life of the Queen was shaped by him. The Queen's life as a mother gave an example to the children of the noblest, and in Prince Albert art and science found one of their most powerful and enthusiastic patrons. Referring to the present daily life of the Queen, Miss Faithfull said her whole mornings were devoted to the perusal of papers requiring her signature, and not one of these ever received it until she had fully acquainted herself with its contents. Her household received her thorough supervision, even down to the most inferior matters, and the same watchful care was shown in all her affairs. The lecturer went on to defend the strict retirement which the Queen had maintained since the death of her husband, and said that the people of England had at last learned that womanhood was superior to queenhood. (Applause.) The many bad sovereigns who had succeeded her had shaken their loyalty that it is doubtful whether they would have endured another dissolute reign; but the Queen had, by her blameless life, restored the lost prestige to the throne, and made monarchical government easy. As an illustration of the idea that there was a personal attachment to the Queen among the people, she distinguished from loyalty to the throne. Miss Faithfull mentioned, among other similar instances, that when the Queen appeared in Windsor Park, in her plain carriage, and surrounded by her family, the cheers of the people were never more enthusiastic or more spontaneous. The scene in St. Paul's Cathedral, on the occasion of the thanksgiving for the recovery of the Prince of Wales, was referred to; and the attempt on her life by a lunatic within a few days after, gave a fresh opportunity for an outburst of affection by the people. The contrast between Victoria and Elizabeth was marked—the one with strong, masculine intellect, with but barren domestic life; the other, wise and moderate, happy in her domestic life, and happy even in her widowhood, which to her should be a crown of glory.

Miss Faithfull concluded her discourse with brief sketches of the various members of the royal family, and by quoting the well-known lines of Tennyson on the Queen.

Mr. Greeley, who was to have presided, was not present, owing to the illness of Mrs. Greeley.

The Presidential Election—Mr. Greeley and His Prospects.

From the Atlantic Monthly for November.

They who are going to vote for Mr. Greeley are as noisily inspired as ever with their grand purpose of reconciliation, and are still busily clasping hands with a benign figment of their fancy, which wears, according to the former relations of each reconciler, now the grief-worn face of what Mr. Greeley poetically calls a broken-hearted people, now the contrite sweetness of a converted Democracy, and now the severely classic yet alluring aspect of office. These stage-embraces, which may be very real to the actors in them, do not persuade the beholder to any vivid faith in their sincerity. We see them; we must allow that they are very energetic; but we think with misgiving that these loving brothers may be still rivals and enemies behind the scenes, as they always have been. Doubtless the millennium will come with a rush when it does come; but is this the millennium? The average voter shakes his head and goes away from the tender spectacle more resolved than before to make the best of Gen. Grant, feeling that in him is not immediate chaos.

This, at least, seems to have been the effect upon the average voter in Maine and Vermont, where the work of reconciliation has only gone so far as to reconcile the Republicans to their triumph, without bringing a corresponding sense of resignation to the exultations. These consoled themselves as they can with the reflection that Maine is chiefly formed of unintelligent rural communities, and that from Vermont they could not reasonably have expected anything. It is should fall out that Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana follow the New-England States, we suppose that the disappointed party will not want reasons besides the majorities against it to account for the result; and if in November it should be totally defeated, we may still expect something ingenious from a party led to ruin by a philosopher.

But in the meantime its candidate has not been idle. It is a few weeks since one of Gen. Grant's numerous deplorable relations attempted to make Greeley capital by a wavering and cowardly assault upon an editor; and in the latter part of September Mr. Greeley reluctantly took the stump for Gen. Grant. We know that this was not his avowed purpose in thus mingling with the people, but we believe that this will be found to have been the effect all the same, at the October elections; and Grant men can only have no dispute with him for his action. As for the affair in the abstract, it is a matter of taste whether a Presidential candidate should or should not ask the votes of the people. There is nothing criminal in it, as there is not in several other political things. We may say that a gentleman to marry her without violating any command of the decalogue, and in an extreme case it would be cruel to forbid her. So, too, a candidate for the Presidency may propose himself to the nation before popular assembliages, and in an extreme case it would be cruel to forbid him. But, on the whole, usage and prejudice are both very much against positive action in either case. It is thought a dignified part in a lady or a candidate to so secrete an affair of marriage or the Presidency, to wait till they are asked, and it is believed that they would only hurt their cause by making advances. We think that Gen. Scott is the only modern instance of a candidate soliciting the favor of the people, and his success was really so small that it did not establish a precedent. Some of our great men, from Washington to Lincoln, has done anything to sanction such a course; they have all apparently cheaply proved it, and modestly remaining in the background. But it may be retorted by his friends that Mr. Greeley is not at all a Washington or a Lincoln, and that he is of too open a nature to assume the virtue of modesty if he has it not. They may add that as to dignity, he is the only man who could do what he has done without loss of dignity—for an obvious reason. There is a great deal of force in this, and the moderate Grant man, the voter of the minor-evil type, may well leave the point in abeyance. In the speeches of Mr. Greeley's opponents, we do not see how there can be any question. He tells how he means to distribute the offices, denying this and affirming that; he scolds the veteran soldiers who assemble in convention against him, he declares that he will not pay rebel pensions, as if he were master of the Senate; he tells them that he knows what they want, and he gives them to understand that he is not to be cajoled by mere speech-making; he declares to Ohio what he said in Pennsylvania; he boasts the strength of his party, and brags in one place of the crowd that heard him in another; he dispenses what the local newspapers say of him; he protests that he will really deny themselves the indulgence to buy votes against him; wherever he has the occasion, he manoeuvres his platform; when he gets home to New-York he replies to the insinuation that his people have telegraphed for him, declaring in effect that his calendar was misdressed by the best authorities in his month's reckoning, that he did not come at all, and has not been brought back. His electioneering makes us forget the vulgarity of Johnson; and destroys all lingering hope that in the world comes to the worst, and he is chosen President, the cause of office will bring gravity and decorum with them. The responsibilities of leadership have brought him nothing of the kind; and there is no reason to suppose that halting wisdom would overtake him by the 4th of March.

"Assumed a virtue if they had it not,"

As we have intimated, we believe that all this will help to elect Gen. Grant. At any rate it makes him appear to contrast a figure of lofty and dignified excellence. It exaggerates his good points and casts a flattering light upon his bad ones. The choice of the misguided may almost exult in the man who is to save us from such a President as we are threatened with in Mr. Greeley. For these reasons we could, perhaps, be grateful to Mr. Greeley, who has not only benefited his enemies, but has helped us to enlarge the sphere of the ridiculous as never was known. But for his peculiar gifts we should have suffered with them. He is not only amusing in himself, but is the cause of making others amuse us. What leader but he could have brought out Mr. Sumner as a humorist? Or Gen. Banks? Or plished Gen. Butler in the attitude of a friend of civilization? Or even over Mr. Phillips into the advocacy of his favorite political theory of anything for the pulling down of Government?

Then think of the vast numbers of editors, people and orators people whom he has set to beating straw throughout the country—old straw, musty straw, straw that has scarcely so much as a husk of chaff in it—at which they thresh away day after day, week after week, with all the zeal of men garnering a harvest! Imagine how he has inspiring his strange forces that Liberal Republicans can pretend to believe in the honesty of Tammany Democrats—that Tammany Democrats can talk of political reform, without so much as winking an eye or thrusting the tongue into the cheek—that the reclaimed Kelpies can speak of reconciliation without laughing!

It is a great deal to do, and Mr. Greeley is a great actor and a most efficient stage-manager to boot. These qualities ought not to be passed without some recognition; but after all, we do not covet them in a President. There are some things which his election would effect, possibly very pleasant to see. It would be amusing to behold the rush of the Democratic hordes upon Washington to share in that impartial distribution of places which has been promised them—the Democrats who have so long and so faithfully served in Congress, the Democrats from Arkansas, alike lank and fierce with their four years from office. It would be delightful to contemplate the Liberal Republican civil-service reformers reducing these cormorants to order. It would be inspiring to see the famous placard for resuming specie payment pinned on the Treasury door. It would be charming to receive again as rulers the unrepentant but recobelled rebel leaders and their sympathizers, who tried to lead a people out of the Union.

But would it be worth the price that we must pay to have all these entertaining novelties? We should not begrudge any ordinary outlay, but we think that Mr. Greeley asks too much for his proposed exhibition, and the people should really deny themselves the indulgence. He cannot complain of unfairness. He has had quite sufficient scope for his talents during the campaign, and he has not neglected his opportunities. He promises he will not seek to repeat his entertainment; but even in this we think it would be wise to have might pull upon us. Those who think differently may comfort themselves with the fact that Mr. Greeley, even if not elected, is not lost to us. We can still have him as an editor—perhaps even as a supporter of Grant's second Administration.

JERSEY CITY BANK ROBBERY.

Trial of Chief of Police McWilliams and Detective Doyle—The Evidence for the Prosecution.

The trial of Chief of Police McWilliams, of Jersey City, and Detective Doyle on a charge of complicity with Proctor, Dennin and Foley, convicted of attempting to rob the First National Bank of Jersey City, was commenced yesterday in the Hudson County Court of Over and Terminer, Judges Depue and Newkirk were on the bench.

The case was opened by the County Prosecutor by reading the indictments. Attorney-General Cole, Mr. Stockton (counsel for the State, and ex-Chancellor Williamson, with Mr. Winfield and Mr. Hoffman, for the prisoners. The County Prosecutor said that the three robbers would be placed on the stand. Chief McWilliams had shown Dennin for some time, and had invited him to come to Jersey City with others, saying that they would have an easy time, there was no watchman at the bank, the adjoining houses could be secured without difficulty, and there was $2,000,000 to be secured. McWilliams was to pay his share of the expense, and he and Doyle were to protect the robbers.

Frank Dennin was the first witness. He testified as follows: I have known McWilliams a year; first saw him in a Mercer-street ball-room, and afterward in Doyle's saloon on Broadway; McWilliams had spoken to Lane of the bank, and Lane introduced the matter at Doyle's; McWilliams thought there was $2,000,000 to be got out of the job; afterward Doyle came to New-York for me, and I met him at a saloon near the City Hotel in Jersey City; we went to the house next the bank and we examined the rooms; I told him I thought the thing could be done, and I would engage the men; he was to protect us and place a proper man on that beat; we got through the first wall in about four hours; this was in the day-time; on the second Sunday before we were arrested we struck the vault and broke through the bank wall; on finding what we had done we went out to get some paper and mucilage, and pasted the pieces up; I and not Doyle, on the next day McWilliams, and told them of the accident; McWilliams said no one ever went into the room over the vault, and the matter would never be discovered; if it was he would be the first to be notified of it, and would see us through; we concluded after that to do all our work at night on the night of the arrest I met Doyle as usual, and he said there was nothing wrong; he did not tell me McWilliams was away, or we should not have come over; as we talked, Sandford (the Cashier of the bank) passed us; Doyle said he was going to his hotel; we worked until after midnight; the night, when we were arrested; McWilliams was to have twenty per cent of the spoils in greenbacks; the remainder we were to divide; nothing was said about Doyle's share.

The cross-examination was at some length, eliciting nothing new.

Francis McDonough, ex-Captain of the Hoboken Police, was next sworn. He testified as follows: I was not acquainted with McWilliams; have known Doyle for fifteen or sixteen years; first saw Dennin and the other prisoners in the County Jail; I was sent for by the County Prosecutor and asked to go to No. 219 West Forty-third-street, where I was to overhear a conversation; I went to the house, and presenting a card and a paper of Doyle's was admitted; I took off my boots, hat and coat and entered a closet; Doyle entered, sat down about four feet from the wardrobe, and entered into conversation with the woman, Mrs. Deveroux; the wardrobe door was half ajar, much open; and I could see all parts of the room and hear distinctly (Witness read from a memorandum book.) Doyle said McWilliams sent him there, as he could not come himself; this was Dennin's first offense, the woman said, and it was a shame for him to go to prison for twenty years; McWilliams she believed had given him away; Doyle denied this, and said that the chief was as true as steel, as she would find if she had patience; he said McWilliams was away because he thought it safer, and there was no possibility of the job falling through; the name Sandford was mentioned a number of times, in what connection I could not hear; Doyle said they were to take the money to a room in New-York which Dennin had hired; he said the tools were valuable and they would get them back; the woman asked Doyle what his wife would say if she knew he was in trouble; Doyle said he would go crazy; she asked him who put up the job, and he answered that she herself had done it; she asked him what his full name was, and he answered, "John Doyle;" I was there from a quarter past nine o'clock until noon, and saw the face of the man in company of Doyle; I identify the prisoner Doyle as the man; Mrs. Deveroux and Doyle went out as twenty minutes past twelve o'clock, and I followed them at a distance; they separated at Fortieth-street and Broadway, and I then met her and served Doyle; I met her again and go over the conversation to see if I had it correct, but by the advice of the County Prosecutor I did not do so.

McDonough was cross-examined by Chancellor Williamson. He had been to New-York before the robbers were tried; the County Prosecutor had sent him as the Hoboken Ferry, where he was on duty, and had given him directions; is going to Forty-third-street, witness did not know he was to meet Doyle, only that he was to go there for the purpose of reposting a conversation.

The examination here ended, and the Court instructed the jury not to allow any one to converse on the subject of the trial in their presence, and requested the Press not to make any comments on the case, and then adjourned until this morning.

Daring Robbery in a Williamsburg Jewelry Store.

Yesterday evening two young men entered the jewelry store of Oliver Arnson, No. 107 Broadway, E. D., under pretext of seeing a watch repaired. While Mr. Arnson was engaged fixing the hands of the watch the two pretended customers seized a tray of rings valued at $400, a pair of diamond studs worth $200, and a cluster ring worth $100; total value, $700. The thieves, who are entirely unknown, escaped with their booty.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange yesterday, Thursday, Oct. 24, Muller Wilkins & Co., by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of Otto Horwitz, Esq., referee, sold the five-story house, stone front, French flat, house and lot situated on the west side of Lexington-avenue, 18 feet north of Fifteenth street, for $18,000, the purchaser being H. Solomon. This property is one of the same pieces knocked down on Wednesday, at the trustee's sale, at which time it nominally sold for $18,500. The principal sale of the day, however, was that in charge of Messrs. Muller & Co., who, by order of F. L. Johnson, Esq., disposed of thirty-six villa plots, located on Fordham Heights, Westchester County, and situate on McComb's Dam road, embracing, in all, 124 62-1,000 city lots. The property was sold by the city lot, and brought, in the total, $47,112, an average of about $325 per lot. The highest price per lot being $480, and the lowest $205. Full details, with name of purchasers, are annexed. The remaining business of the day resulted as follows: Joseph McGuire, under the direction of Butler H. Bixby, Esq., assignee, sold one lot, 25.5 by 93, on the south-west corner of Tenth-avenue and Seventy-seventh-street, to Owens Donelan, for $2,400; also, one lot, 25 by 103.4, in rear of above, on the south side of Seventy-seventh-street, to R. P. Fairchild, for $4,700. A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., under a Supreme Court foreclosure order, John N. Lewis, Esq., referee, disposed of property on the north side of West Sixty-second-street, 100 feet east of Tenth-avenue, embracing a lot, 25 by 100.5, with a three-story brick house thereon, sold to Frederick Eins, for $8,500. No other sales were made, the following auctions being adjourned: Legal sale by James M. Miller of house and lot No. 203 West Twenty-eighth-street, north side, 218 feet east of Ninth-avenue, and the leases of two houses and lots adjoining, Nos. 323 and 325½, adjourned until Thursday of next week. Oct. 31. Legal sale by R. H. Ludlow & Co. of store and lot No. 66 Front-street, adjourned until Friday, Nov. 8; and legal sale by A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co. of three houses and lots on West Fifty-second-street, east of Ninth-avenue, known as Nos. 306, 311 and 312, adjourned for two weeks to Nov. 7, it being at the same time announced that No. 306 had been withdrawn from the market.

For today, at the Exchange, four legal auctions are announced, at which City real estate will be offered, viz.: By Allen, Dooley & Henriques, one lot, with improvements, on East-side of Avenue A, 200 feet south of Ninth-avenue; by E. H. Ludlow & Co., house and lot No. 151 East Forty-ninth-street; by A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., house and lot No. 8 Elizabeth-street, near Bayard-street; and by William Kennedy, four lots on One Hundred and Fourteenth-street and house and lot on Great Jones-street, between Broadway and the Bowery.

THE
CHICAGO AND CANADA
SOUTHERN.
FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND
THIRTY YEARS
7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

INTEREST PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER. REGISTERED OR COUPON PATAZLE IN LONDON OR NEW-YORK.

THIS ROAD, WITH THE CANADA SOUTHERN, FORMS THE NEW TRUNK AIR-LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO. IT IS UNDER THE SAME CONTROL AND MANAGEMENT, AND IS BEING BUILT BY THE SAME PARTIES WHO BUILT THE CANADA SOUTHERN, MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN Z. TRACY, DAVID DOWS, WILLIAM L. SCOTT, HENRY BARNAM, R. A. NORSETH, JOHN M. BURKE, M. L. SYKES, JR., ALL DIRECTORS BOTH IN THE CHICAGO AND NORTH-WEST AND THE CHICAGO AND ROCK ISLAND; GEORGE OPDYKE, OF THE NEW-YORK MIDLAND; SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, SAMUEL J. TILDEN, KENYON COX, AND OTHER PROMINENT RAILROAD MEN. THE ROAD IS BEING RAPIDLY BUILT IN THE BEST POSSIBLE MANNER, WITH SIXTY-POUND STEEL RAILS THROUGHOUT ITS ENTIRE LINE, AND WILL BE COMPLETED DURING THE COMING YEAR; NEARLY ONE-HALF OF THE ROAD WILL BE COMPLETED AND IN RUNNING ORDER BY THE 1ST OF JANUARY NEXT, SO THAT THE ENTIRE LINE, FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, WILL WITHIN THAT TIME BE IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION. THE BUILDERS OF THIS ROAD CONTROL ENOUGH OF THE LEADING LINES RUNNING FROM CHICAGO TO INSURE AN ENORMOUS BUSINESS FROM THE START. TAKING INTO CONSIDERATION THE IMPORTANT FACT, PATENT TO ALL WHO STUDY THE STATISTICS OF TRADE, THAT THE PRESENT TRUNK LINES, NOW TAXED TO THEIR UTMOST CAPACITY, ARE NOT AFFORDING FACILITIES EQUAL TO THE GREAT AND CONSTANTLY-INCREASING DEMAND FOR TRANSPORTATION, AND THAT THIS ROAD, THROUGH ITS ENTIRE LENGTH, BEING PRACTICALLY STRAIGHT AND LEVEL AND SHORTER BY THIRTY-FIVE MILES THAN BY ANY OTHER NOW BUILT, OR THAT CAN BE BUILT, it must be apparent that this line is not only needed, but must be a great success. The proceeds of these Bonds will complete and equip the entire road, and we confidently recommend them as a safe and profitable investment.

INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON AND
WESTERN RAILWAY.
The Short Central Trunk Route.

This road has been in operation from Indianapolis to Pekin, 26 miles, for two years. Its earnings have rapidly increased, and are now, at rate sufficient to pay all current expenses, interest on all its Bonded Indebtedness, including that made for its Extension, and, in addition, a dividend upon its Stock.

The Extension is 117 miles in length, and connects Champaign with the Mississippi River at Keokuk. Thence through a well-developed part of the State of Illinois, abounding in resources for a great business, and is, when in short time is equal to complete the other part of the Road with which it is consolidated, making a total line of 459 miles. Intimate western connections make this route the most direct between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

The entire road traverses a very fertile region, and possesses the best subsidy a road can have, viz., IMMENSE BUSINESS IMMEDIATELY AT COMMAND.

Under a fair valuation, the property of the older part of the road, above prior obligations, is fully equal in amount to the Bonds now issued, which are further and completely secured by a first and only mortgage on the extension, one-half of which is near completion, and the remainder will be finished early in 1873.

The Bonds are Seven Per Cent. Gold, $1,000 each, convertible into stock, at par at the option of the owner, and may be registered without charge. PRICE 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST in currency. Coupons, January and July 1, free of tax.

We recommend the Bonds to all classes of investors as an undoubted security.

THE HORSE PLAGUE.

Fifteen Thousand Horses in this City Unfit for Use.

Temporary Suspension of Travel on Stage Lines.

Scenes at Hospitals and Opinions of Leading Veterinary Surgeons.

Spread of the Epidemic in Brooklyn, New-Jersey and Surrounding Country—Horse-Owners Alarmed.

The horse disease continues to spread throughout the City as an alarming rate, and, unless some abatement should cease within the next three or four days, travel on the City railroads must be greatly reduced, and, on many lines suspended altogether for the time being, while all branches of business will suffer, almost to a temporary block. So far as can be ascertained, no deaths have occurred among the horses attacked, but it is thought that the disease has not prevailed sufficiently long for fatal results, and that it will be ten days yet before the extent of the danger is determined. On the other hand, several of the animals first attacked are growing visibly better, and in the places first visited by the epidemic it is claimed that with proper rest and attention to the horses the deaths will be few. The great difficulty at the railroad companies' stables appears to be in the inability to detect the epidemic before the outward symptoms set in, and, consequently, numbers of horses go out of the stable and are driven the entire route while suffering from the disease as badly as stied under the care of the surgeon, thus aggravating the attack and rendering it more difficult of treatment. The same difficulty exists, although to a necessarily less extent, in livery and private stables. The veterinary surgeons, both allopathic and homeopathic, are now agreed that the disease is a species of influenza, and contagious in its nature. Researches of science give little room for doubt that many epidemics depend upon the growth and diffusion of minute vegetable organisms, which cause disease by being taken into the system and growing there at its expense.

Dr. Hinkley, in a recent article on the small famous torula, which is commonly known as the "yeast plant," says:

"It is certain that in some animals devastating epidemics are caused by lungs of low order, similar to those of which torula is a sort of offshoot. It is certain that such diseases are propagated by contagion and infection, in just the same way as ordinary contagious and infectious diseases are propagated."

This idea is at present held by a very large number of scientific men, both out of and in the medical profession. Experience is so strongly in favor of it that, while there is still much to be learned upon the subject, enough is known to guide toward efficient measures in preventing epidemic disease and moderating its dangers.

Practically, the case stands thus. Epidemics in man and animals are in a great proportion dependent upon vegetables or spores which are taken into the body, multiply with inconceivable rapidity, and wear it out as crops wear out a soil, as the oidium, one of these vegetable growths, exhausts and ruins the grape.

Certain chemical agents, especially carbolic acid and sulphate of iron are copperas, are fatal to blight upon this unsightly crop. It is sulphur which has been of so much use in limiting the ravages of the oidium, and sulphur, when combined with iron, as is seen in ordinary copperas, has been found very serviceable as an antizymotic agent—that is, as an enemy to spores. Carbolic acid acts by arresting their growth, paralyzing their vital actions, stunting them, as it were. It therefore becomes a question whether one or both of these agents should not form part of the ordinary police of a stable, and, if disease results, disinfect, and, during an epidemic, cloths saturated with a solution of carbolic acid hung up in the stable as in a sick-room, so that the odor, which is simply a minute subdivision of the substance itself, might exert its purifying influence upon the air. This, in addition to washing the stalls with a solution of carbolic acid, would probably mitigate the severity of an epidemic, while similar measures, regularly carried out, at all times, would be likely to avert it.

There are those who disbelieve in the agency of spores in causing disease, as there are skeptics as to the efficacy or vaccination, but the quotation from the distinguished writer above referred to shows what eminent supports it gives to what is called the "germ theory" of disease, and, from the nature and circumstances of the case, it may safely be assumed that the prevailing epidemic is associated with the presence of a large fungus.

During yesterday the disease developed no new phases, and in most instances the same line of treatment was pursued. A sensation report that the epidemic had in some instances attacked the men employed in the car stables, proved, on investigation, to be wholly imaginative. The fears of a fatal result seem to have abated.

AT THE CAR STABLES.

The condition of the horses at the Third-avenue Railroad car stables, Sixty-fifth-street, is considered very serious, although the superintendent yesterday had faith that the disease would not be of a fatal character. From 6 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon to the same hour yesterday over five hundred additional horses were found to have been affected, so that the number of sick animals were then reckoned at not less than one thousand. Of these only three hundred could be considered unfit for work, and they were, therefore, placed in the hospital, while the others were limited to running single trips. The horses belonging to the Grand Central branch, as soon as they become unfit for work, are immediately sent to the up-town stable and replaced by sound animals; consequently the number of sick horses on this branch yesterday was but small. As yet this Company have been enabled to run all their regular trips, only hauling off the extra cars.

At the Fourth-avenue Railroad stables every one of the 104 horses was yesterday affected, although only sixty were not working. Of this latter number but seven could be considered seriously affected. The Company was compelled to take off thirteen cars.

The horses of the Second-avenue Railroad stables, Sixty-second-street, were yesterday in a better condition than at many of the other depots, only eighty-five being sick, and but ten in the hospital. The number of new cases in the twenty four hours was but twelve.

The Sixth-avenue line drew off ten of their Canal-street and Broadway cars yesterday, while sixteen were added to the number of those in hospital. This line suffers more than any other in the City, but yesterday several of the patients showed signs of improvement.

Five cars were withdrawn from the Broadway and Seventh-avenue line yesterday, while twenty-seven additional cases were sent to hospital, making 183 in all, or thirteen per cent. of the entire number in the stables.

The Eighth-avenue line continues to run on time, only nineteen horses being laid up, eight of which were attacked yesterday.

About forty of the horses of the Ninth-avenue Railroad are affected, of which twenty are in hospital, eight new cases having appeared yesterday. Two cars have been withdrawn.

The Belt line has withdrawn ten of its cars, and placed sixty-five horses under care of the surgeon. It is the opinion of the superintendent of this line that many of the horses first attacked will be fit for the road today, and that the number of recoveries will be equivalent to the new cases.

At the Forty-second and Grand-street stables, 200 are affected, of which only fifteen are in hospital. Three cars have been withdrawn from the road.

Of the 400 horses in the stables of the Bleecker-street line, fifteen or twenty are afflicted with a slight cough. No cars have been taken off, and none of the horses are so ill as to be unable to work.

Until Wednesday evening the horses in the stables of the Dry Dock and Tenth-avenue line seemed free from disease. Now, out of the 400 horses in the Company's stables, twenty-two are disabled, and two cars were withdrawn from the road.

At the stables of the Adams Express Company, on Church-street, yesterday, over 100 horses were affected. Out of 130 horses which were in good health on Monday, not one is not one in fit condition for working. But few internal remedies are given, the blistering process being considered best. The appearance of Church-street, with twenty or thirty express wagons lying idle, gives a Sunday aspect to that busy thoroughfare.

The United States Express Company employ about 150 horses, 100 of which are disabled. Their business, however, is not interrupted, as they are hiring horses wherever attainable.

The National Express Company had only four or five teams working yesterday, instead of about thirty as usual.

The American Merchants' Union Express Company have the majority of their horses within their stables. Their agent at Rochester reports that all their horses in that city are sick, and some of them are not expected to recover.

The general opinion of the superintendents of express companies' stables is that the disease will only linger a few days, after which their business will be resumed.

THE STAGE LINES.

The Broadway and Fourth-avenue stage lines had been compelled to take off about a dozen stages yesterday, in order to give their sick horses rest; but a prospect of recovery had been manifested in the fact that the animals were again taking food, after having refused it for some hours. None of the horses had died, and all appeared better yesterday afternoon. The same statement of facts applies to the Madison-avenue line, coupled with the assertion that the Company had taken off yesterday eighteen of their stages, but expected to resume them on Monday.

The Broadway and Twenty-third-street line withdrew their stages altogether, after making only two trips. Of the 470 horses in the stables of this line, nearly all are affected, but the officials claim that the stages were withdrawn for the day in order to give the horses rest. Sixty-three stages are usually run on this line.

THE LIVERY-STABLES.

Notwithstanding the precautions adopted by the keepers of the livery-stables, the epidemic appears to have nearly suspended the business of these establishments. Taking, as an instance, the block between Broadway and Seventh-avenue and Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets, which includes eight livery and boarding stables and 344 horses; of the latter, 216 are suffering so severely as to be incapable of work of any kind, and the business of two of the establishments is temporarily suspended.

It is difficult to form an estimate of the number of horses affected in private stables, but assuming six of these, which were visited yesterday, to be a fair indication of the condition of all, the proportion is less than in either the car or livery-stables, being about fifteen per cent. lower than in the latter.

The condition of affairs may be summarized as follows: The eighteen car and stage lines of the City had in use and laid up yesterday 11,823 horses. Of these about two-thirds had been attacked by the epidemic up to 5 P. M., and 963 so seriously affected as to be turned into hospital. Against this, about twenty-seven per cent. of the horses in the livery and boarding-stables are temporarily disabled, while two-thirds of the stock in these places have been affected.

DEATH AT AN EAST-SIDE STABLE.

Five horses affected with the disease died yesterday at the stables of the Avenue B line, and a post-mortem examination will be made today.

The two elegant white horses used by Mr. Daly at the Grand Opera-house in the Pompeian scene of "Le Roi Carotte," were stricken down by the prevailing distemper last night. They were valued at over $5,000, and are probably the first of their grade to be affected by the epidemic.

Report to the Board of Health.

A special meeting of the Board of Health was held yesterday in reference to the epidemic. Dr. Stephen Smith in behalf of the Sanitary Committee, reported that he had visited a large number of railroad, livery, and private stables, and found the disease almost universal. It first appeared at the Sixth-avenue stables on Friday last, and the two horses first attacked are now improving rapidly. The doctor was of the opinion that the disease was confined to the throat and air passages, and did not involve the lungs to any great extent. The first symptom is a chill, followed by high fever and rapid breathing (respiration reaching as high as fifty a minute.) So far no fatal case had been heard of, the horses recently brought to this city having died from the usual causes. Dr. Smith in his report recommended no preventive or cure, and the Board adjourned without taking any action on the matter.

The Epidemic in Brooklyn.

The disease prevails on the other side of the river with but little less severity than in the Metropolis, and the number of cases in Brooklyn is steadily increasing. The car companies have found it necessary to take off several cars, and the physicians have shut up their horses in their stables, and are going on their rounds on foot. Of the 2,000 horses employed by the lines of the Brooklyn City Company, 230 are unable to work, and more than double that number have been attacked. The DeKalb-avenue line run their Gold-street transfer-cars only in the morning and afternoon, 100, or one-third of their horses, being laid up. All the other railroads, the gas companies and private stables are affected in proportion, and the business of the express companies is seriously delayed. The treatment is generally the same as that employed in New-York, but the true character and exact origin of the disease remains an enigma. The valuable trotters Clarence, Fanny Fern and Jack Draper have been attacked by the disease, and the race meetings at Hall's Track and Prospect Park will probably be stopped for the present.

The Disease in New-Jersey.

Nearly one-half of the number of horses used by the Jersey City and Bergen Horse-car Company are affected by the disease, and the North Hudson County Horse Railroad Company have suffered in nearly the same proportion. Messrs. Colgate & Co. were unable to send out any trucks yesterday, only five or six horses being free from the malady. Nearly half the horses in the livery stables are sick, and at one place, Astley's, sixty out of seventy horses are laid up. In Hoboken there are said to be 200 horses sick. Business as the Bremen docks is entirely suspended. The carmen employed at this and the Hamburg docks have seventy-five horses altogether out of work. Much alarm prevails throughout the country, and not half the usual quantity of hauling was done on the streets yesterday.

The Disease in the Vicinity.

In Westchester County about three per cent. of the horses have been affected.

The distemper is rapidly spreading in Long Island City and already causing much inconvenience to business.

Horse Influenza.

There is a great dread, at this moment, among horse owners, in view of the very rapid spread and general prevalence of the horse disease; to such an extent does this panic prevail that many fear that the number of our horses will be greatly lessened. There is no just cause for such apprehension. The disease yields readily to proper treatment, which should be as follows: Cleanse the stables; fumigate with roll brimstone; carefully exclude any cold current of air that could strike on the extremities or spinal column of the horse; steam the animal's head, and administer in a small warm bran mash sixty grains of tartar emetic and 20 grains of finely-powdered nitre. Let this be given at night, when an extra blanket should be put on; the horse's bed should be freshly made, and must be deep and warm, so as to invite sleep and insure rest. If the short, dry cough that usually appears at the commencement of this peculiar form of influenza becomes as all troublesome apply tincture of cantharides to the throat, and along the line of the wind-pipe as far as the sternum or chest-bone. Ventilation should also be carefully attended to; foul air, laden with putrescent gases, will inevitably strengthen the disease and reduce the physical powers of the patient. The cause of this present epidemic, influenza, is doubtless due to the presence in the atmosphere of poisonous gas; this first causes an irritation in the throat, and where the sufferer is promptly cared for the sickness is over in from three to five days. When the horses affected are not promptly withdrawn from work the consequences are more serious; the irritation in the throat spreads to the bronchial tubes, the lungs become diseased, inflammation and congestion follow, and if the patient does not die, the recovery, at best, will be slow, and the strength and health of the animal seriously impaired. However, even in aggravated cases, where the chest and lungs are engaged, it is bad veterinary practice to bleed and purgate, the disease is most debilitating, and few horses can recover if further reduced. In severe cases of epidemic influenza the veterinary surgeons of the British Isles prescribe the Turkish or bath-house; in Erinda the vapor bath is used, and both are equally prompt and efficient in their action.

The car and stage horses of this City suffer invariably from all possible forms of equine disease, because they exist under the most unfavorable circumstances; badly fed, poorly housed, overworked, and never groomed, they are the ready victims of disease. The skin of the overworked horse acts more than it should, and his internal organs are taxed until the machine is worn out, or rendered incapable of recovery when seized with a slight attack of illness. Farmers should withhold green food from their teams at the time, be they either well or in the influenza. A few carrots fresh dug, about one pound given with the earth adhering once a day, and a cooling diet during the illness, is all that is needed. The drink should be pure water, with a little coarse wheaten bran mixed in it, or linseed tea reduced to a mucilage, or oaten meal gruel steamed to a jelly. Avoid raw oaten meal water and half-cooked linseed tea, also corn in any form whatever.

A Letter from Gen. Roberts, U. S. A., to Mr. Bonner on the Horse Epidemic.

STAMFORD, Mass., Oct. 22, 1872.

Mr. Bonner:

DEAR SIR: In the Spring of 1868 a disease broke out among my cavalry horses at Fort Sumner, New-Mexico, that appears to me identical with that now raging among horses in our cities, and in a very few days became an epidemic.

At first it defied all treatment, and the great majority of horses attacked by it died. On examining the throats of the dead horses, I found the lining membrane of the larynx highly inflamed and thickened, and a thick mucous one filling it, causing suffocation. I ordered all horses, on the first appearance of the disease, to be thoroughly rubbed between the lower jaws and along the larynx down the neck with spirits of turpentine, causing a very severe external irritation and blister.

I saved every horse thus treated, and in a very few days entirely broke the distemper and checked the epidemic.

I do not doubt that thousands of horses, where this epidemic prevails, can be saved by adopting this treatment. It acts more quickly as a counter-irritant than any other remedy I know, and relieves the fever of the membrane of the larynx in a very few hours. Besides, spirits of turpentine is always at hand, and can be more readily applied than any other counter-irritant. It should be thoroughly rubbed in through the hair to the skin, for a distance of some twelve or fifteen inches, under the jaws and down the neck of the horse, immediately over the larynx. The remedy is severe, and makes the skin sore for several weeks, and for an hour caused great suffering to the horse. But it acts promptly and effectually, and in my judgment it will be found the best, and perhaps the only cure for this fatal malady, causing such suffering and loss among horses throughout the country. My love of horses induces me to address you, and to ask you to give to this communication such place in your paper as to reach the public in the most prompt and general way, and stay one of the greatest misfortunes now threatening all communities, and destroying by thousands the noblest animal created for the service of man.

Very truly yours, B. S. ROBERTS,
Brevet Brig.-Gen. U. S. A.

The Horse Disease in Bangor.

From the Bangor (Me.) Whig, Oct. 22.

About twenty horses in this city are sick with a mysterious distemper resembling in all its symptoms the epidemic which has been raging among the horses in Toronto, Montreal, Rochester, N. Y., and elsewhere.

Letters From Correspondents.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In view of the possible total interruption of street travel from the horse disease, allow me to make a suggestion. To facilitate the recovery of the poor sick animals, who are now wearily dragging along heavily-loaded cars, let the different railroad companies make up trains of say five cars each, and attach dummies to each of these trains. They might stop at every fifth street, which would accommodate most people. Sick horses require rest and care as well as sick men, and the humane public would willingly put themselves to a little extra trouble. They can act humanely and at the same time enjoy quick transit. HAYWARD.
NEW-YORK, Thursday, Oct. 24, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In relation to the epidemic among horses in this City, we learn from reliable parties from Buffalo that under homeopathic treatment no fatal cases occurred in that city, and as it may be of interest to many of your readers we will give you the particulars of the treatment there pursued. In the beginning of the attack aconite and tartar emetic are given in alternation; as soon as the febrile symptoms and cough have somewhat subsided and the discharge from the nose became thick and mucous, tartar emetic and arsenic are given in alternation, and with this simple treatment all cases were cured. A. T.

Prevalence of the Epidemic in Other Cities.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 24.—The horse malady has invaded thousands of horses in this city and neighboring towns and cities. It appears to be spreading over New-England. The Red line of omnibuses, on Washington-street, has stopped running; the Metropolitan Horse-railroad Company has been compelled to largely reduce their trips, and all other business depending upon horses is affected to a greater or lesser degree.

Dispatches from Portland announce the distemper in that city.

KEENE, N. H., Oct. 24.—The prevalent horse epidemic appeared here two or three days ago, and it is estimated that a hundred or more horses are now affected in this town. There are fourteen horses sick in one livery-stable.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 24.—The horse epidemic has appeared in this city.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The horse disease has made its appearance in this vicinity, and three death have occurred.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., Oct. 24.—There was a heavy frost last night, but the reports this morning show that the horse disease has taken on a severer form than ever. Last evening there were no horses to be seen in the streets. The store-keepers are delivering goods to their city customers in hand-carts. The hand-cart ordinance prohibiting the trundling of carts on the sidewalks is suspended. Persons who have contracts for building houses have suspended work to a great extent, and discharged the laborers. It is now evident that the animals attacked took the disease from City Point, three days before it was discovered. A few fatal cases are reported this morning, and the disease has appeared among the canal-horses here, and along the line of the canal. The suspension of the street-cars is a great inconvenience. There is great difficulty in procuring conveyance for funerals.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The horse disease has passed its crisis here and is now abating. But few horses have died, and these more from hard usage than from the effects of the disease. The canal boats here have almost entirely stopped. No boats have stowed, and none will be. Grain is moving in large quantities as usual. The treatment of the disease here has been very successful.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 24.—The report that the horse epidemic has broken out in the stables of the West-side Omnibus Company, is pronounced without foundation.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 24.—The horse disease, so prevalent elsewhere, made its appearance in this city today, very suddenly, and a number of valuable horses are suffering from its effects.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 24.—The Canadian horse disease has reached this city. Many horses are afflicted with it, but there have been no fatalities as yet.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 24.—There is considerable alarm spread in regard to the horse disease. No case has yet been known, but there was an untrustworthy report of one this afternoon.

The Condition of Our Beef Cattle.

It is believed by many that the beef cattle arriving here from Albany, Buffalo and Chicago at the different cattle yards of Weehawken, Communipaw and One Hundredth-street are daily dying of some epidemic disease. This is not the case. It is true deaths in the cattle yards are of daily occurrence, but they spring from other causes than disease, being mainly the result of fatigue, harsh treatment, scarcity of water, &c. Most of these dead animals are taken off the cars either dying or already dead, and their carcasses are sold for food.

Mrs. Horace Greeley Dying.

Mrs. Horace Greeley has been lying very dangerously ill at the residence of Mr. Johnson, No. 133 West Fifty-seventh-street, for some days past, and her death has been slowly and surely approaching. She has been attended by Dr. E. Bayard. Her complaint is the worst type of consumption, combined with dropsy. Some days ago her physician and immediate relatives gave up all hopes of her ultimate recovery, and sentled the event with what fortitude they could summon. Mr. Greeley and his daughters have been in constant attendance at the bedside of the sufferer, and aided by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, have been assiduous in their efforts to render her last moments as happy and free from pain as possible.

The Taxpayers' Protective Union—Important Meeting at Carmansville.

A large and influential meeting of the Taxpayers' Protective Union was held last night at Carmansville. Mr. E. H. Brown occupied the chair, and explained that the object of the Association was to endeavor to make the Common Council and the Legislature improve the northwestern section of the island, and give greater facilities for traffic; also, to drain and grade the streets and avenues, and remove the nuisance to which the inhabitants were subjected. Resolutions were adopted, appointing committees to agitate these matters. Messrs. Lawson N. Fuller, Harrison S. Hawley, and others addressed the meeting, pointing out the abuses under which the inhabitants were suffering, and demanding that the street about the Washington Tube, as was urged, could only be done by electing honest and energetic members of the Legislature, and not such as represented them in Albany last session. A resolution was also accepted urging Judge Leonard to give an immediate decision in the case between the Park Commissioners and the Commissioner of Public Works, the quarrel between these Departments stopping the completion of various public works which are of immediate interest to the citizens of the north-west section of New-York. The meeting then adjourned.
